Post-War Program

INDUSTRIAL MOBILIZATION

By REAR ADMIRAL ROGER W. PAINE, USN
who was Director of Materials and Foreign Trade, Munitions Board, from September 1947 until a few weeks ago when he became Deputy General Inspector for the Chief of Bureau of Ships in the Western Sea Frontier.

WORLD War II proved conclusively that our military forces and industrial production are of co-equal importance in victorious defense of our Nation.
Also proven in modern warfare is that

Rear Adm. Paine

these co-equals must be brought to full strength quickly.
Time, in modern warfare, is of the essence.

These facts are no longer simply the belief of a few; they are national common knowledge.
Our people know we must have an adequate, efficient and well equipped fighting force ready for expansion in the event of a national emergency. That is military preparedness.

They also know we must have an industry ready for immediate conversion from peaceful effort to war production in the shortest possible time. Making such rapid conversion possible is industrial preparedness. The science of conversion is commonly known as industrial mobilization.

Planning industrial mobilization is the statutory responsibility of two government agencies, The National Security Resources Board promulgates the overall industrial mobilization plans, covering civilian and industrial requirements and incorporating the military industrial mobilization plans into the overall plan.
The Munitions Board of the National Military Establishment has the responsibility for planning the military aspects of industrial mobilization.

While our Congress and people have been deciding the size of the military force which constitutes military preparedness adequate for initial defense and to back our national commitments, much has been accomplished in the way of industrial preparedness; much of it by the old Army and Navy Munitions Board, the predecessor to the present Munitions Board.
Since the latter is a continuation of the former, I shall not attempt to differentiate between the accomplishments since they, too, are a continuing process.

One of the first logical steps toward industrial preparedness was the prevention of disintegration of the huge addition to the National industrial capacity which came into being during World War II.
During that war, the government spent many billions of dollars to build specialized munitions plants. If nothing was done to protect those plants, they would be converted or scrapped and their designed productive ability lost, necessitating replacement in the event of an

Though the basic design and major characteristics of the ship have been fixed, the location of certain structures, such as the stacks, elevators and the telescopic bridge, is still under study. This artist's conception reflects the Navy's present plans for the carrier, the largest U. S. Naval vessel to be constructed so far. (Story on page 154.)

Service Consolidations
Tested on West Coast

Upon the recommendation of General Mark Clark, Sixth Army Commander, four Armed Services consolidation measures in nine Western states have been ordered by Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

These include: Transfer of Army ammunition activities from the Benicia, Calif., Arsenal to the Naval Ammunition Depot, Mare Island, Calif.; consolidation of Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps recruiting facilities; consolidation of public information facilities with establishment of a joint PIO in San Francisco; and movement of the offices of the San Francisco District Engineer to new offices in a Government owned building.

If the measures initiated by General Clark, following study by his specially created Armed Forces Headquarters, prove successful, these and subsequent projects will be applied to all Armed Forces activities throughout the United States.

Now being reviewed by General Clark
prior to submission to Secretary Forrestal is a project for joint use of facilities for cold storage and the handling of perishable food supplied in the San Francisco and Seattle areas and for their shipment overseas.

In various stages of consideration are projects for the elimination or movement of the Marine Corps Depot at Islais Creek, San Francisco, or its consolidation with a nearby Naval supply depot; consolidation of control of allocation of ship repairs in the Bay Area; joint use of reserve component training facilities; joint use of procurement offices; elimination of duplication of services of the Navy and the Army Port of Embarkation at Seattle; joint use and slash or consolidation of civilian personnel procurement facilities and services; and joint use of automotive maintenance facilities and services. Ten additional projects are under preliminary study but have not yet been assigned to special panels for investigation and survey.

Army Promotion Lists

Continuing its publication of the complete Regular Army promotion lists, the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL today publishes the lists for Medical,
Medical Service, Dental, Veterinary Corps, Chaplains Corps, and Professors. This begins on Page 160.
Next week's issue will contain the first half of the Captains' promotion list.

Enlisted Efficiency Reports

The Army this week released AR No.
600-180 relating to enlisted efficiency reports and indicated clearly that it does not expect a disproportionate number of personnel to receive superior ratings.

By means of a chart, the Army showed that it anticipates that out of a representative group of 50 men, approximately four will receive "one" ratings, while 20 should receive a rating of "three." Four men would receive a rating of "five" on an average and 11 would be marked as "two" with the other 11 scored as "four."

The full text of the Army's regulation on enlisted efficiency reports is printed below, with a sample report reproduced to show the 25 questions which will be asked.

1. Purpose, type, and use of enlisted efficiency reports.—a. The Enlisted Efficiency Report (DA AGO Form 297) provides for a report on an enlisted man's job performance and personal characteristics during a definite period of service. In addition, it may indicate a need and provide a basis for counseling and adjustment; discover individuals with certain capabilities and talents; and appraise individual performance for use in selection, assignment, training, or promotion of personnel, and for use in disposition of those inadequately qualified. Four types of efficiency reports (regular, special, Classification Board, and annual) will be rendered as prescribed in paragraph 5.

b. Preparation of an enlisted efficiency report will require the rater and the indorsee to know both the individual and his job. It is important to measure a man's performance against the requirements of his job.

c. The efficiency report will be considered as an inventory of the strong and weak points

Prepare for "Plucking" of Army and Air Officers

(Texts of the new Army and Air Force Regulations begin on page 151 of this issue.)

Army and Air Force regulations for the removal of officers from the active list were released this week.

The action by the two Services, although not identical, implements provisions of Public 810 of the 80th Congress.

This legislation replaces the Class "B" procedure provided in the National Defense Act and Public Law 190 and the emergency wartime legislation providing for the relief of officers from active duty.

Each Service prescribed eight basic causes for the removal of an officer, with the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Air Force given broad powers to eliminate unwanted officer personnel.

The Army's policy was made known in Circular 288, which declared: "The purpose of this circular is to vitalize the active list of the Regular Army by providing the means for elimination of officers whose performance of duty, general efficiency, or conduct is such as not to justify retention as officers of the Army, or whose retention as officers of the Army is not justified for other reasons prescribed by the Secretary of the Army."

The Air Force, in AF Regulation No.
36-2, said "the provisions of this Regulation are applicable to all officers of any of the components of the Air Force of the United States who are serving on active duty."

On 1 July of each year, an Army Screening Board will review records of all officers on the active list. Those found undesirable will be called before a Board of Inquiry. If this board recommends dismissal, the file will be transmitted to the Adjutant General's office where a Board of Review will take final action.

The Air Force will also utilize three boards in the removal procedure. First, there will be a Screening Board, to be convened by direction of the Secretary of the Air Force. It will study records of all officers on the active list of the Regular Air Force.

A Board of Fitness will afford a "fair and impartial hearing" to any officer selected by the Screening Board to show cause for retention.

Finally, a Board of Review will give final perusal to the facts and will determine whether an officer recommended for dismissal by the Screening Board and the Board of Fitness should be retained or removed.

Dismissal will be ordered by the Secretary of each of the Services.

With regard to pay for officers removed from the active list, the new law outlines the following procedure:

"Sec. 106. Each officer removed from active list of the Regular Army or the Regular Air Force pursuant to this title shall—

"(a) if on the date of removal he is eligible for voluntary retirement under any provision of law then in effect, he shall be retired in the grade and with the retired pay to which he would be entitled if he were retired upon his own application;

"(b) if on the date of removal he is not eligible for voluntary retirement, he honor-

Baltimore Sun—"... An example of the way not to help this difficult process (of unification) has just been given us by the convention of the Air Force Association in New York. The association ... passed a resolution denouncing the existence of a separate naval air arm, denouncing the Navy's campaign for a strategic bombardment program based on super-carriers and escorting vessels, and demanding the transference of all air operations to ... the Air Force."

New Haven (Conn.) Register—"A closer co-ordination than now appears operative is much to be desired ... the cost of operating our Armed Forces now stands at approximately an unprecedented and unthinkable $15,000,000,000 a year. There can be little doubt that this cost could be reduced materially through businesslike joint operations."

Washington Post—"Unification of the Armed Forces ... is gaining meaningful substance. Perhaps the most impressive instance of unification at work is the activity under the direction of the Munitions Board ... But the most encouraging indication that the three services are thinking as one—at least on the top level—is the disclosure that joint plans have been devised for industrial mobilization and military strategy in the event of war."

Christian Science Monitor—"... Observers see in the Joint Chiefs' agreement on requirements, in the recent clarification of the major roles of the services, and in the cooperative division of their procurement functions signs that unification, at least at the top, is really beginning to work."

(Columbus) Ohio State Journal—"It needs to be remembered that when worst comes to worst the correspondents who represent the newspapers and the press associations are in posts of danger also. The Pentagon memorial to those who died in this kind of service in World War II is ample evidence of this fact."

San Francisco Chronicle—"General MacArthur was tart but justifiably so in his response to Russian complaint of the Japanese occupation labor policy ... The Russians ... now have a lesson that they better be sure their hands are clean before they take on so plain a speaker as General MacArthur."

Kansas City Star—"The record of gains from a year of military unification is not impressive ... there have been certain changes calculated to make the separate services work together ... But there has not been enough of these bits of progress to achieve the large results in the spirit of harmony and the tangible shape of economy that were to have come from the unity."

Nashville Tennessean—"It is only too apparent that thus far Military Air Transport Service ... has fallen far below the old standards of efficiency set by Naval Air Transport Service during its independent operation. We have lost rather than gained by this aspect of the merger."

Miami Herald—"It is heartening to know that our military leadership has contrived a master strategic plan ... That fact may well give substance to the boast that the plan puts us in the strongest position we have held since the so-called cold-war started."

Cincinnati Enquirer—"We all hope ... plans for industrial mobilization will never have to be taken down off the shelves. But it is a comfort to know that preparedness on the industrial front has kept pace with rearmament in the uniformed services."

Sen. Gurney Praises Troops

Morale of American troops stationed in Germany is high, according to Senator Chan Gurney (R-S.D.), Chairman of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, who returned to Washington this week from an inspection of military installations in Europe, the Near East and northern Africa.

In an interview with THE ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, Senator Gurney declared his contact with American troops in Germany revealed "excellent" morale, good equipment and well-directed training. He also praised the work of Army and Air Force personnel of "Operations Vittles" — the Berlin airlift.

The Chairman said that he visited Navy installations at Gibraltar where he conferred with Admirals Conolly and Sherman. He was impressed with the fine work done by the relief ships.

Mr. Gurney said that in his observation our military personnel are being well fed and that there seems to be little difficulty with housing in the areas he visited. He said that he did hear a number of complaints about the currency exchange and its effect on the purchasing power of our personnel.

Reenlistments in the European Command are at a high rate, Senator Gurney said, adding the recent change from two to three years duty in Germany has his approval.

Of the airlift equipment, Senator Gurney said larger planes are needed during the approaching Winter months, stressing that the need for coal in Berlin will tax planes now in service. He also noted that the number of dependents in Berlin will be kept to "around 1,000."

A detailed report of his findings will be made to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, and to the Committee on Armed Services, Senator Gurney said.

Sees Service Pay Need

The need for increases in the pay of Service personnel is reported to have impressed the members of the civilian professional staff of the Senate Committee on Armed Services who have been visiting the Army, Navy and Air Force installations and interviewing Service personnel on behalf of the Saltonstall "Watch-Dog" subcommittee.

Deficiencies in housing facilities also impressed the observers as being a strong factor in depressing Service morale which otherwise they believe would be high.

The observers were particularly impressed by the need of pay increases by officers of the grade of major in the Army and Air Force and lieutenant commanders in the Navy and in commissioned ranks below them. These, they felt, should have substantial increases in pay. On the other hand they felt that officers of the grades of lieutenant colonel and commander, and above, should have an increase in "take home" pay by giving them exemption from the Federal income tax. They likewise believe that retired personnel should be exempt from the income levy.

Army Housing and Trailers

To meet its critical housing shortage, the Army will seek in the 1950 budget funds for thousands of family dwellings.

In addition, to provide immediate relief for personnel at camps chosen for Selective Service training, the Army will develop "first class" trailer camp facilities which will be made available at a cost of approximately $95 a year.

Officers and enlisted men would provide their own trailers and be paid normal rental allowances.

This emergency plan has been approved by the Chief of Staff and commanding generals of the six ZI Armies and have been directed to submit estimates of requirements.

Lt. Gen. Henry S. Ourand, director of logistics, General Staff, has revealed also the following additional developments on the Army Housing front:

In the current fiscal year about 1,500 1080-square-foot new permanent type family units will be built at Army installations. These will each provide the equivalent of six rooms 12 by 15 feet. All of these units will be the non-commissioned officer type and will be constructed exclusively on permanent posts.

Priority will be given to non-commissioned and junior commissioned officers.

For its 947,000 man strength authorized by Congress the Army will need about 193,000 sets of family quarters—107,000 for non-commissioned officers and 86,000 for officers and warrant officers. Including the 1,500 units to be built this year, however, there will be available only about 39,000, of which half are temporary or converted units. The Army wants to provide quarters on posts for all authorized military personnel as rapidly as appropriations are made available by Congress.

Present policy will be to concentrate on major installations slated for permanent use regardless of the size of the Army.

General Ourand said the Army plans to seek considerably more than the 4,277 sets of family quarters proposed in the fiscal year 1949 budget but which were set aside.

Gen. Reynolds' EUCOM Visit

Hitler's favorite beer hall in Munich is now a bustling soldier's club, Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, Chief of Special Services, reported this week upon his return from a two months European inspection tour.

With Brig. Gen. R. V. Rickard, Chief of European Command Special Services, General Reynolds visited major installations in Germany and Austria and also inspected soldier tour facilities in Switzerland.

In addition to the famous Munich beer hall, the Army has 107 other service clubs in the European command, staffed by 347 recreation directors.

With regard to diversified Army Exchange responsibilities, Special Service officials are satisfying the vital needs in Europe for such items as baby food, diapers, women's dresses, shoes, coats and other apparel, General Reynolds said.

Memorial to Fliers

More than $600 already has been contributed for erection of the memorial to the five U. S. Air Force fliers shot down over Yugoslavia in 1946.

Sponsor of the patriotic project is the Hon. Arthur Bliss Lane, former United States Minister to Yugoslavia. He is receiving contributions at 2442 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington 8, D. C.

Mr. Lane has expressed the wish that individuals give from $1 to $5 for the memorial, thus insuring wide participation in the tribute to the American airmen heroes.

"For Army personnel and their dependents and also for American civilian personnel in occupied areas," the Exchange Service is the sole source of supply," General Reynolds explained.

Some interesting statistics on soldier participation in Special Services on-post recreational activities in Europe were revealed by General Reynolds. He said major sports in the European Command drew more than 2,500,000 spectators and claimed over 87,470 participants from occupation personnel in the past year. Bowling led the seven major sports with 60,000 players entered in 1,250 teams that bowled on 330 EUCOM alleys. Basketball, softball, football, baseball, track and field and boxing ranged next in popularity.

Occupation personnel had 68 football teams playing on 96 fields; 850 basketball teams playing in 133 gymnasiums; 750 softball teams on 800 fields; 150 baseball teams on 60 fields; 50 track and field teams on 62 fields; and 34 boxing teams in 22 outdoor arenas and 133 gymnasiums.

AF Temporary Promotions

The Air Force selection board to pick 250 lieutenant colonels for temporary promotion to the grade of colonel is slated to convene in Washington about 15 Oct.

Last week, Air Force officials revealed plans to promote temporarily 5500 officers to the grades of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

Criteria for selection of officers for promotion to colonel and lieutenant colonel were reported in last week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Similar criteria for major and captain promotions are expected shortly.

Munitions Board Chairman

Appointment of Mr. Donald F. Carpenter, Chairman of the Military Liaison Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission, as Chairman of the Munitions Board, has been announced by President Truman.

Mr. Carpenter is a vice president of Remington Arms Company. He is also a member of the Corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

ably discharged in the grade then held, with severance pay equal to one month's base and longevity pay, being received at the date of such removal, multiplied by the number of years of his active Federal commissioned service: Provided, That the total severance pay shall not exceed one year's base and longevity pay so computed: Provided further, That a fractional part of a year amounting to six months or more shall be counted as a complete year for the purpose of computing amount of severance pay only."

It is understood, however, that the Commission on Service Pay has included this matter in its studies and some amendments to the above formula may be sought in the next Congress.

Army Elimination Procedure

FOLLOWING is the text of the Army's procedure for forced elimination of Regular officers as set up under the provisions of the new act and as promulgated this week in Circular 288:

Pending revision of appropriate regulations, the following procedure is established for the removal of officers from the active list of the Regular Army, except as noted in paragraph 2b:

1. General.—The Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948 (act, 29 Jun 48; Public Law 810—80th Cong.; JAAF Bul. 29, 1948) provides that the Secretary of the Army may for such causes as he deems satisfactory remove any commissioned officer from the active list of the Regular Army in the manner prescribed in that act. Procedure for eliminations pursuant to that act are published herein. Any references to "officers" who are being processed for removal from the active list herein after pertain to "officers of the Regular Army."

2. Purpose and scope.—a. The purpose of this circular is to vitalize the active list of the Regular Army by providing the means for elimination of officers whose performance of duty, general efficiency, or conduct is such as not to justify retention as officers of the Army, or whose retention as officers of the Army is not justified for other reasons prescribed by the Secretary of the Army.

b. This circular will not be used to accomplish revocation of commissions within the first 3 years after appointment in the Regular Army. The procedure for such action is contained in section I, Circular 19, Department of the Army, 1948.

c. This circular is not intended to be disciplinary, and procedures prescribed herein are not to be used in lieu of trial by court martial or action under the provisions of Article of War 104. However, recurrent trials by court martial or recurrent action under Article of War 104 may be cause for taking action under paragraph 3 below.

d. Normally, an officer should be given an opportunity to demonstrate his ability for a reasonable period in his permanent grade, if appropriate, immediately prior to initiation of elimination action for inefficiency.

3. Causes (the text of this paragraph is reproduced in the box on this page).

4. Boards of officers.—The separate and distinct boards of officers which will be appointed to take action under the provisions of this circular are as follows:

a. Screening board.

(1) The purpose of this board is to provide for a review of the records of officers on the active list and to determine those officers who should be required to show cause for retention on the active list. The decision to require an officer to show cause for retention shall be based upon his failure to attain minimum standards of performance in conformance with paragraph 3.

(2) The screening board will consist of five general officers and one or more recorders without vote. It will be convened by the Secretary of the Army as soon as practicable and once annually thereafter.

b. Boards of inquiry.

(1) The purpose of these boards is to afford a fair and impartial hearing to any officer selected by the screening board to show cause why he should be retained on the active list.

(2) A board of inquiry will consist of not less than three general officers and one or more recorders without vote. No officer who previously has considered the case or recommended the officer concerned for removal from the active list, or who is to be called as a witness in the case, will be included as a member of a board of inquiry. These boards will be convened at such place or places as the Secretary of the Army may prescribe. Orders announcing the appointment of a board of inquiry will indicate clearly that the board is convened by order of the Secretary of the Army under provisions of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948 for the purpose of determining the suitability for retention on the active list of officers appearing before it.

c. Board of review.

(1) The purpose of the board of review is to review each case in which a board of inquiry has recommended removal of an officer from the active list and to make recommendations as to the retention of the officer concerned.

(2) The board of review will consist of not less than five general officers and one or more recorders without vote. No officer who previously has considered the case or recommended the removal of the officer concerned from the active list, or who is to be called as a witness in the case, will be included as a member of the board of review. The board will be convened by the Secretary of the Army as he deems appropriate.

d. Board recommendations.—A board appointed under the provisions of b or c above will recommend:

(1) Retention on the active list, or

(2) Removal from the active list.

e. Procedure for removal from the active list.—a. Immediately after the promulgation of these provisions and on 1 July of each year

Army and Air Force Officer Removals

The Departments of the Army and Air Force this week released separate lists of causes for which officers may be removed from the active list under the recently enacted law. Each Service prescribed eight basic causes for dismissal, including a final proviso which gives to the separate Secretaries wide discretionary powers in effecting such removals. For the Army and Air Force, the causes for removing an officer from the active list are as follows:

ARMY

In general, an officer will be considered for removal from the active list for any of the following or similar or related causes:

a. A continuous or progressive falling off of the officer's performance of duty over a period of time, which has resulted in a low and unacceptable standard of efficiency in the officer, as reflected in his efficiency ratings.

b. A record of mediocre service, normally extending over a period of not less than 3 years and covered by efficiency ratings rendered by at least two different rating officers during that time.

c. Demonstrated inability to exercise the necessary leadership or command required of an officer of his grade in the Army.

d. Inability or failure to assimilate the technical proficiency required in an officer of the Army.

e. Inability or failure to discharge properly assignments commensurate with his grade and experience.

f. Habitual intemperance or recurrent instances of other personal misconduct.

g. Repeated failure to meet personal financial obligations or to manage properly personal affairs which affect detrimentally the performance of duty of the officer concerned and his usefulness to the service.

h. Any other cause which the Secretary of the Army may determine.

AIR FORCE

1. Falsification, material omission, or misrepresentation of facts in the Personal History Statement or any other documents which are executed in connection with appointment to the AFUS or any of its components or call to active duty which, if known by the appropriate authority at the time of appointment or call to active duty, would have precluded the appointment or call to active duty of such an individual. In each case of appointment in the regular component of the Air Force of the United States, an investigation is undertaken by the Department of the Air Force to verify the statements made in the Personal History Statement required to be completed by the officer. If it is found that the answer to any question contained in the Personal History Statement is incorrect, incomplete, or misleading in any particular, it may be considered as a cause for action to revoke the commission of the individual concerned. In addition, the investigation may reveal evidence of traits of character or past conduct which indicates the individual's undesirability or unsuitability as an officer in the Air Force and which, if known, might have precluded his appointment. Such evidence will likewise be considered as just cause for revocation of commission.

2. Any misrepresentation, written or oral, of facts with intent to deceive, defraud, or mislead.

3. Recurrent instances of personal misconduct or habitual intemperance.

4. Repeated failure to meet personal financial obligations or other mismanagement of personal affairs which reflect discredit upon the Air Force.

5. Demonstrated inability to exercise the necessary leadership or command.

6. Lack of ability to acquire the technical proficiency required of an officer of the Air Force of his grade.

7. Failure to meet minimum efficiency standards prescribed for officer personnel.

8. Any other causes which the Secretary of the Air Force may prescribe.

thereafter, a screening board, appointed and convened under the provisions of paragraph 4a, will review the records of all officers on the active list to determine which of such officers will be required to show cause why they should be retained in the Regular Army.

b. When any commander considers that the manner of performance of duties by an officer under his immediate command or observation is such as to justify the removal of the officer from the active list, he will transmit the prescribed recommendation therefor, together with pertinent supporting evidence and an appropriate efficiency report, through channels to The Adjutant General. If at any time a reclassification board recommends the removal of an officer from the active list and the convening authority of the board concurs, or when other action is recommended by the board, and the convening authority is of the opinion that removal from the active list is warranted, the records in the case will be forwarded to The Adjutant General for referral to the screening board.

c. When the screening board recommends that an officer under its consideration be required to show cause for retention, the case will be returned without further action to The Adjutant General for notification of the initiating agency.

d. When the screening board recommends that an officer under its consideration be required to show cause why he should be retained on the active list, the complete files in the case, including the recommendation of the screening board, will be transmitted to The Adjutant General, who will notify the appropriate commander of the major command or the head of the administrative or technical service that the officer concerned must show cause for retention on the active list. Such notification will include the reasons for the decision. The commander or the head of the administrative or technical service then will notify the officer concerned and will include in the notification the reasons for the decision and full information concerning the officer's rights as outlined in paragraph 7. Within 10 days subsequent to his receipt of notification, the officer concerned will submit a statement that he understands his rights and that he desires either to—

(1) Appear personally and/or be represented by counsel before a board of inquiry convened under the provisions of this circular, or

(2) Submit his resignation under the provisions of AR 605-275, or

(3) Apply for voluntary retirement, if eligible.

Upon receipt of the officer's statement, the commander or the head of the administrative or technical service will transmit such statement to The Adjutant General. The information so transmitted will include the names of at least three available general officers recommended for appointment as a board of inquiry, together with a suggested place of meeting for the board. In the event that the required number of qualified general officers is not available, the submitted information will contain, in addition to the names of the available qualified general officers, a request that the Department of the Army make available such other qualified general officers as may be required to bring the case to an expeditious conclusion. The Department of the Army will publish the order appointing the board of inquiry and will refer to it the records in the case.

e. After consideration by the board of inquiry the proceedings and records in each case in which the officer is recommended for removal from the active list will be forwarded to The Adjutant General for referral to the board of review for appropriate action.

f. In cases where the board of inquiry recommends retention on the active list, the proceedings and records will be forwarded to The Adjutant General. The case will thereupon be closed and shall not be subject to further action, except that such officer may again be required to show cause for retention at any future time in accordance with the provisions of this circular.

g. After consideration by the board of review as indicated in e above, the cases will be handled as follows:

(1) If the board of review recommends retention, the case shall thereupon be closed and shall not be subject to further action, except that such officer may be required to show cause for retention at any future time in accordance with the provisions of this circular.

(2) If the board of review recommends removal, such recommendation shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Army for his action thereon.

6. Board procedure.—a. Except as otherwise prescribed herein, the boards appointed under the provisions of paragraph 4b and c will be governed by the applicable provisions of AR 420-5. Members of the boards will be subject to challenge and will be sworn.

b. An officer required to show cause for retention will be permitted to appear in person and/or be represented by counsel, if he so desires, before any board of inquiry or board of review, and shall, at all stages of the proceedings, be allowed full access to, and be furnished copies of records and data pertinent to his case.

c. Testimony or evidence, except efficiency reports and WD AGO Forms 66 (Officer's, Warrant Officer's, and Flight Officer's Qualification Record), for and against the officer concerned normally will be presented in the form of depositions. Removal of Air Officers

FOLLOWING is the text of the new Air Force Regulation, No. 33-2, covering the revocation of Commissions or removal of officers from the Active List of the Air Force:

SECTION I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

1. Purpose. The purpose of this regulation, which is effective immediately, is to prescribe the standards and procedure for accomplishing for cause the revocation of commissions or removal from the active list of officers of the Air Force of the United States who are serving on active duty. Appropriate portions of this Regulation apply to all commissioned officers belonging to the Department of the Air Force, as prescribed in Joint Army-Air Force Adjustment Regulations 1-1-1 and 1-11-20 and subsequent amendments, who are on active duty.

2. Applicability:

a. Department of the Air Force Commissioned Personnel. The provisions of this Regulation are applicable to all officers of any of the components of the Air Force of the United States who are serving on active duty.

b. Department of the Army Commissioned Personnel. Department of the Army commissioned personnel who are serving on active duty with the Air Force will be screened at the same intervals and judged by the same standards as apply to their counterparts (i.e., nonprobationary Regular, probationary Regular, Non-Regular on active duty, etc.) within the Department of the Air Force. When it has been determined through any of the procedures prescribed in this Regulation that any commissioned officer of the Department of the Army serving on active duty with the Air Force should be considered for revocation of commission or removal from the active list, the case with all supporting papers will be forwarded through channels to the Chief of Staff, USAF, Washington 25, D. C., ATTENTION: Director of Military Personnel, DCS/P.

3. Causes. The criteria which have been established as a guide for determining causes for which an officer should be investigated with a view to elimination or other appropriate action including, of course, exoneration, are listed in attachment 1. In some cases recommendations for elimination should be mandatory; in others there may be extenuating circumstances which may outweigh the dereliction of duty; e.g., inability to exercise leadership may be over-weighted by the fact that the officer in question is occupying a position which calls for an older, higher ranking, and more experienced officer.

4. Restrictions on Separation or Transfer. Air Force personnel upon whom Board of Fitness procedures, action under Public Law 810, 80th Congress (contained in JAAF Bulletin 29, 1948), court-martial, or resignations or voluntary retirements in lieu thereof are pending will under no circumstances be relieved from active duty or transferred from one major air command to another until final action has been taken upon their cases by the Secretary of the Air Force unless specific authority to do so is received from Headquarters USAF.

SECTION II—REVOCATION OF COMMISSIONS

5. This section prescribes the procedures for the revocation of commissions of the following personnel:

a. Officers on the active list of the Air Force who have performed less than three years of continuous active commissioned service subsequent to being currently commissioned in the United States Air Force (including prior continuous commissioned service in the Regular Army) and without regard to the length of active service they may have performed prior to their acceptance of such current commission.

b. All officers holding current appointments in the United States Air Force Reserve who are performing active commissioned service with the Air Force either in an AFUS (without component) or USAFR status.

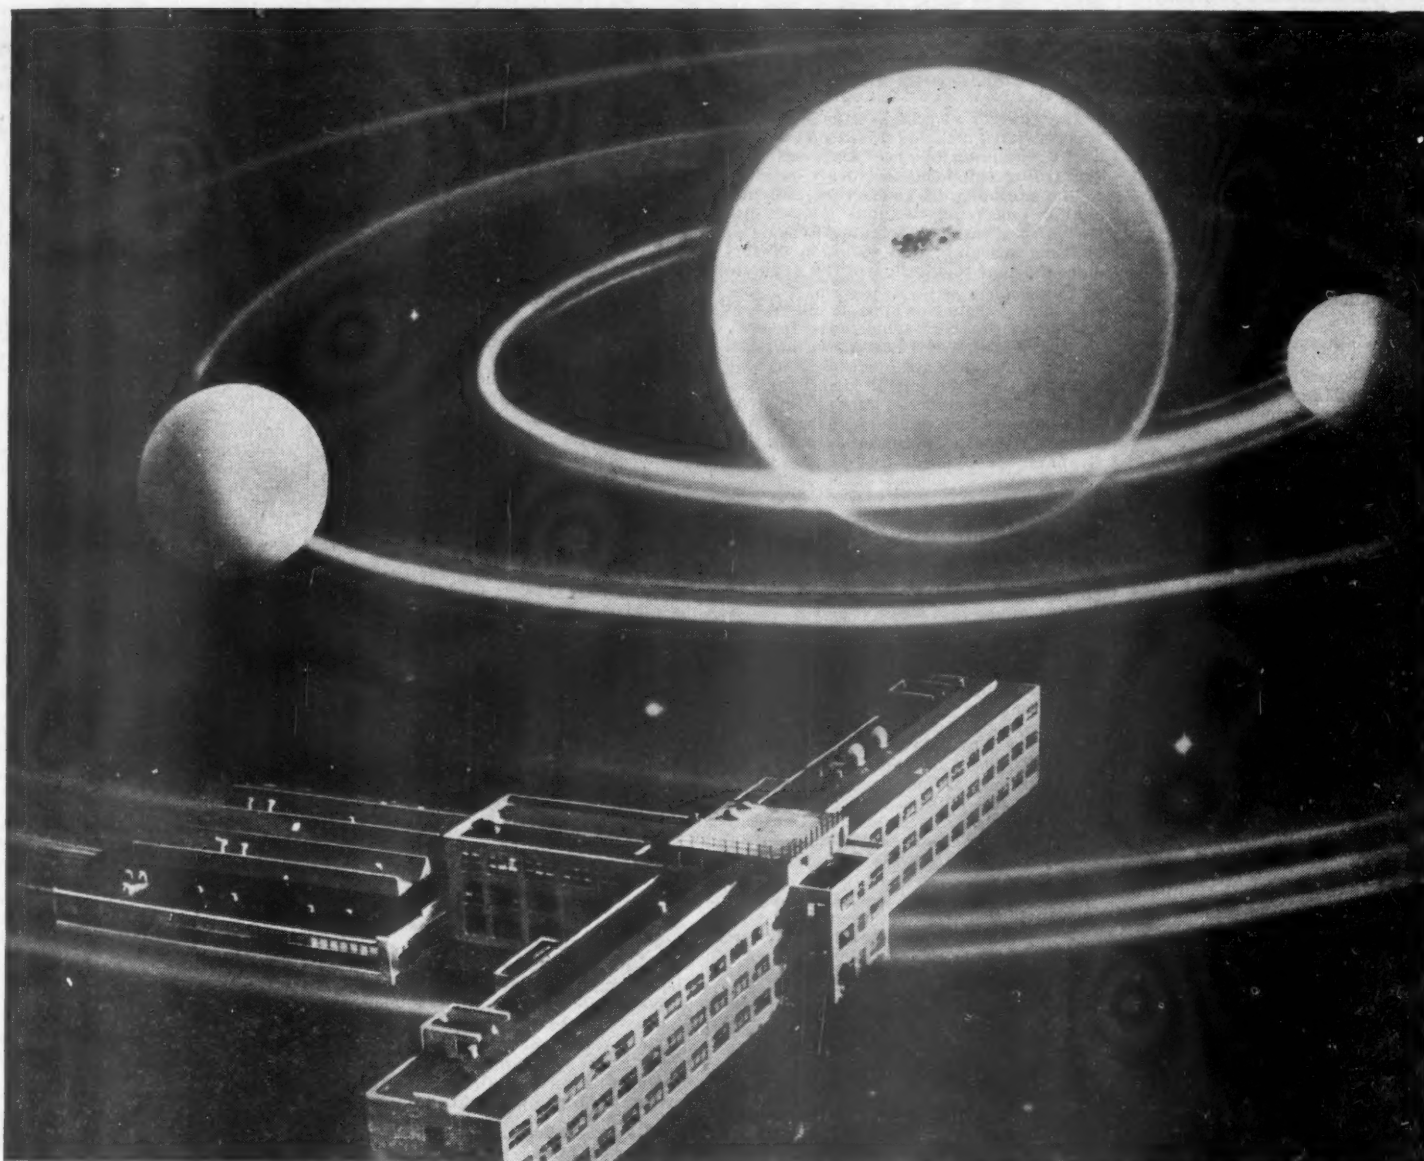

c. All AFUS officers not holding appointments in the USAF, National Guard, or Air Force Reserve.

d. All officers holding current appointments in the Air National Guard who are performing active commissioned service with the Air Force.

6. Criteria. The criteria which will be utilized to determine whether or not an officer specified in paragraph 5 may be considered for revocation of commission have been set forth in attachment 1.

7. Procedure. In general, Boards of Fitness will not be appointed under the authority contained in this section in those cases involving probationary officers (those specified in paragraph 5a) who have completed more than two years and eight months of their probationary period. If the commander concerned believes it impossible to complete Board of Fitness procedures and discharge proceedings (if recommended and

"Sunspot" research, by RCA engineers, helps radio communications to dodge interference from magnetic storms. RCA Laboratories is a center of radio and electronic research.

93,000,000 miles of laboratory space

A cyclonic spot erupts on the face of the sun, and—here on earth—we feel it. Sunspots cause "magnetic storms," which disrupt radio communications.

What can be done about it? Research, during which RCA scientists and engineers "worked" by instrument on the sun—93,000,000 miles away—offers an answer.

For many years, science has related magnetic storms to sunspots. An accurate way of forecasting these disturbances was needed.

RCA scientists took a new tack. They noted that interference was most intense when sunspots were in a certain "critical area." Location and activity were observed to be more important than size.

Using this knowledge, RCA communications engineers now accurately forecast the beginning and end of magnetic storms . . . They have established a daily magnetic storm forecasting service which is distributed like weather reports throughout the world. As a result, transmission of messages can be arranged over circuits or paths that will dodge interference.

Such a pioneering spirit in research gives efficiency of service and leadership to all products and services bearing the names RCA, and RCA Victor.

When in Radio City, New York, you are cordially invited to see the radio, television and electronic wonders at RCA Exhibition Hall, 36 West 49th Street. Free admission. Radio Corporation of America, RCA Building, Radio City, New York 20.

Navy Selection Boards

Ten Navy selection boards will be convened during the next six months, an official Navy source disclosed yesterday.

The first of the group, a line selection board to recommend officers on active duty for temporary promotion to Rear Admiral, will be convened on 15 November.

Other selection boards to recommend the promotion of line officers on active duty are scheduled as follows:

Commanders — December 1948

Lt. Comdr. — January 1949

Lieutenants — January 1949

Lt.'s (jg) — March 1949

Boards for staff officers will also meet early next year, and include the following:

Captains — January

Commanders — January

Lt. Comdr. — March

Lieutenants — March

Lt.'s (jg) — April

The selection board for Rear Admirals will consider all Line Captains except those serving in appointments of limited duration who will have three years' service in grade 30 June 1949, computed from date of rank, and also those officers now serving in appointments of limited duration in the grades of Rear Admiral and Commodore.

Promotion Zone

The Rear Admiral promotion zone for officers not restricted in the performance of duty will terminate with Captain Thomas F. Darden, Jr., (Signal Number 594).

Details concerning eligibility and promotion zones for the other boards will be carried in subsequent issues of the ARMY & NAVY JOURNAL as they are announced by the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

For the purpose of these boards, line officers include engineering, aeronautical engineering, and special duty officers. The boards will not consider those Reserve officers on active duty in connection with the administration, training and organization of the Naval Reserve, and paid from Naval Reserve Appropriation.

Armed Forces Staff College

Applications for two new classes at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., are now being accepted by the Navy Bureau of Personnel.

Line and staff officers of the Regular Navy of the rank of commander are eligible to apply for the courses. A selection board, which will consider individual applications and a list of senior commanders recommended by the Navy Department, will select Naval officers to attend the courses which are five months in length.

The Armed Forces Staff College trains officers of the armed forces in joint operations. The quota for each course is 150 officers of the Navy, Army and Air Force.

Ample quarters are available for officers attending the college who are not accompanied by dependents. Quarters for married officers accompanied by their families are available for approximately 85 per cent of the officers ordered to the college.

Marine Colonel Dismissed

Col. Leslie F. Narum, a Marine Corps officer with 23 years of service, was recently dismissed from the Marine Corps and the U. S. Naval Service following a General Court Martial and conviction on 5 charges, the Department announced this week.

The charges of which Colonel Narum was convicted included falsehood and conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman (regarding shipments of furs); conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline (receiving, without license, imported merchandise including drugs and pharmaceuticals); and violation of foreign exchange regulations of the Republic of China.

Colonel Narum was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps in 1925. During World War II he served in three different assignments overseas, and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for outstanding performance of duty at Okinawa.

Dismissed on similar charges was Marine Warrant Officer Burton E. Graham, convicted on five charges based on unlawful shipment of automobiles and furs.

Marine Corps League

The Marine Corps League, national all-Marine veterans group, brought its twenty-sixth annual assembly to a close at Milwaukee last week.

Elected to the office of national commandant of the League was Theus J. MacQueen of Albany, N. Y., former senior vice commandant. Approximately 3,000 of the League's 47,000 members were present for the convention which lasted from 22-26 Sept. Also in attendance were General Clifton B. Cates, Marine Corps Commandant; Major General Lemuel C. Shepherd and William T. Clement; Brigadier General J. T. Selden and Christian F. Schlitz; and Major Julia E. Hamblet, Director of the Marine Corps Women's Reserve.

The Marine Corps League was organized in 1922 by the late Lieutenant General John A. Lejeune, World War I hero and the League's first national commandant.

Per Diem for NRO's

The Comptroller General has rendered blanket decision B-79676 in which he declares that Naval Reserve officers moved from place to place for temporary additional active duty are entitled to per diem in lieu of subsistence while on such additional duty. An official digest of the decision follows:

"Naval Reserve officers who are ordered to proceed to a specific location for temporary active duty and who subsequently are ordered to one or more locations for temporary additional duty upon the completion of which they are to return to their original temporary duty station may be considered for the period of such temporary additional duty as being 'away from their designated posts of duty' within the meaning of section 12 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942, as amended, so that per diem in lieu of subsistence may be paid while on such temporary additional duty. 26 Comp. Gen. 557, distinguished."

Women Marines Can Still Enlist

The limiting date for submitting applications by members and former members of the U. S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve has been extended from 15 Sept. 1948 to 1 Jan. 1949, the Marine Corps announced this week. The deadline for officer applications, also set at 15 Sept. 1948, was not extended.

New Aircraft Carrier

The Navy's new 65,000-ton aircraft carrier should be capable of operating an airplane well over 100,000 pounds, the Navy revealed this week.

Operation of such aircraft with their increased range will greatly reduce the carrier's chance of discovery by the enemy and greatly increase the probability of surprise attack, the Navy said.

Construction of the huge carrier will begin late this year or early in 1949, and will cost an estimated $124,000,000. The 1030-foot long vessel will have a totally clean deck operating area for its planes, minus the usual "island" on the starboard side. The flag and ship bridges, formerly on the island, will be telescopic on the new vessel.

Elevators, used to transfer planes between the hangar and flight decks, will be located along the sides with a larger elevator at the after part of the flight deck.

The ship, as the Navy artist's conception shows, will have four catapults for planes, one on each side (launching to the side) and two on the bow. By increasing the number of catapults, the Navy said, the launching interval will be shortened.

As yet unnamed, the giant carrier is designated CVA-58. It is the third flush-deck carrier in the Navy's long line of "fast-travelling air bases." The Navy's first carrier, the USS Langley, commissioned in 1922, was a flush deck carrier converted from a collier hull.

Foreseeing the operation of 100,000-pound aircraft, the Navy pointed out that the carrier from which it operates must afford:

- (1) Deck strength for impacts as high as 500,000 pounds.
- (2) Stability for high top side weights.
- (3) Increased flight deck area.
- (4) Room for increased supplies of fuel, munitions, and added personnel.
- (5) Additional armor and armament.
- (6) High speed.

These requirements mean increased displacement and increased beam with a proportional increase in deck length as dictated by modern shipbuilding practice.

The Navy has estimated that the new super carrier would normally take 48 months to complete, although with high priority it probably could be completed in less time.

Navy Speeds Plane Ferrying

Three divisions of Navy planes took off this week from Moffett Field, Calif., for Hawaii, to demonstrate a fast and practical method of ferrying large numbers of carrier type aircraft from their home base to advanced areas.

Composed of Corsairs, Bearcats, and Skyraiders, the planes began the 2100 mile trans-oceanic flight on 5 Oct., refueling on board two carriers stationed on the route.

The use of carriers in this manner, the Navy said, emphasizes their function as a highly mobile air base, and demonstrates that needed aircraft can be ferried over vast ocean reaches, using the shortest geographical point-to-point route, or the route avoiding areas of possible enemy action, or utilizing the best weather areas, all unhampered by having to land at fixed land bases.

The Navy aircraft carriers USS Tarawa and USS Princeton were positioned 800 miles from San Francisco and Honolulu respectively. All 12 planes landed aboard the vessels, quickly refueled, and took off again. The planes landed at the Naval Air Station, Barbers Point, Oahu, T. H., approximately 11½ hours after takeoff.

In addition to the heavy carriers, destroyers and cruisers acted as picket vessels stationed at lesser intervals along the route, thus assuring that the planes would be under constant radar surveillance throughout the entire trip. Sea Air Rescue long-range patrol planes assisted in covering the first and last legs of the three-stage flight.

Jet fighter-types were not used for the operation, the Navy said, because it was more a demonstration of practicality than speed. Carrier jets will be used later, however, in further demonstrations of the fast ferry method.

Planes used in the operation are the main types of piston-engine aircraft used by fleet air groups today. They had no special equipment for the long trip. When they landed aboard the carriers to gas, the operation was treated as a normal landing procedure by carrier personnel.

Test Danger Area of Jets

Navy tests, using a human "guinea pig," have recently been conducted at the Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md., to determine how near a person can safely approach the intake of a jet plane.

Lt. A. L. Hall, Navy Medical Service Corps, was the human subject used in the tests. With heavy safety lines attached to his body, Lt. Hall approached the nose of the North American FJ-1 Fury as the plane ran at full power, and experimented to see how near he could get without danger of being sucked in by the powerful draft.

The tests indicated that an extremely cautious person can get within two or three feet of the nose of the plane without being caught in the intake. The danger area is less off to each side of the nose.

The extent of the danger area in front of a jet engine has been a subject of speculation since a civilian mechanic was killed a year ago at the Muroc Dry Lake test center in California when he walked in front of a jet plane and was sucked in. The plane's engine was operating at full military power at the time.

In the tests at Patuxent, it was found that the air velocity reached 38 knots at a little over two feet distance in front of the plane. Three feet away, the velocity dropped to 15 knots, and four feet away to five knots. Lt. Hall reported that he was able to stand two feet from the plane, with his reactions being "that caused by a 30-knot wind."

A dummy figure the size and weight of a man also was used in the tests. The findings were similar to those with the live subject. The Navy emphasized that the results apply only to one type of plane used in the experiment, Twin-jet aircraft, with their smaller intakes, would have a greater danger area directly in front, the Navy said.

2d Marine Div. History

The Second Marine Division History Board is looking for over 20,000 wartime members of the division who moved without leaving forwarding addresses, or failed to acknowledge "gift offers."

The Board is almost ready to distribute free copies of the unofficial World War II History of the Second Marine Division to men who served in that organization between 7 Aug., 1942 and 2 Sept., 1945.

Eligible men who have not received confirmation address cards are requested to communicate with the Willa Maddern Agency, 215 Fourth Avenue, New York City, in order to receive their free copy of this book. Author of the history is Richard W. Johnston, civilian correspondent who landed with the Marines at Tarawa, now an assistant editor for Life Magazine.

New Naval Reserve Units

"The proper placement of scientific personnel in the Naval service in time of war is of prime importance," according to Rear Adm. T. A. Solberg, USN, Chief of Naval Research.

A new Naval Research Reserve program, instituted recently by the Navy Department, was the occasion for Admiral Solberg's statement. He pointed out that placement of scientific personnel "should be accomplished before an emergency develops," adding that "plans to insure maximum utilization of commissioned scientists are being actively pushed by the Office of Naval Research."

New Naval Reserve units composed principally of officers professionally engaged in research or related activities are being organized under a program designed to make trained personnel immediately available to the Office of Naval Research in event of mobilization.

emergency. This, of course, would mean time lost, and critical and scarce materials diverted into that replacement. In a future emergency, we can afford losing neither.

The steps taken were to incorporate those plants which were not easily sold to private management for use in peacetime industry into an industrial reserve. The military establishment had custody of this reserve until recently when Congress passed a law which provides for a National Industrial Reserve with the Federal Works Agency administering the reserve. Through this medium, hundreds of vital war plants are preserved along with their worth, which amounts to billions of dollars, and most important, the time their replacement would cost is preserved.

The designed productive capacity of numerous additional plants sold to private management was also preserved by use of the National Security Clause, which is included in the sales contracts of the war plants and provides that the plant will not be altered in any way which will prevent its rapid reconversion for the production for which it was designed and built.

Concurrent with the plant preservation activities, the Armed Services developed another component of the industrial reserve—the preservation of vital machine tools. The tentative goal at present is 182,000 special and general purpose machine tools essential in war production and without which much time would be lost in "to war" conversion.

Thousands of them are already cleaned, treated with preservative materials and shipped into government storage, ready for use if required in a national emergency.

There are a great number of materials required in war production which are not available in sufficient quantities within our national borders. Their sources are usually anywhere from three to ten thousand miles away—far across seas which become extremely hazardous during wartime. Consequently, there is only one way to insure their availability when needed in a national emergency. That way is stockpiling them within our borders.

Two years ago, Congress passed Public Law 520, which provides for the development of a National Stockpile of strategic and critical materials, and subsequently appropriated $275 million for such materials. This was expended and along with materials in residue of World War II, the Nation has a stockpile valued at about six hundred million dollars, which, of course, constitutes a good measure of industrial preparedness. However, the stockpile is way behind in its schedule, and, unfortunately, out of balance. In recognition of this, Congress, in the closing days of the last session, voted an additional $525 million for stockpiling strategic and critical materials.

The Munitions Board is working hard in the development of coordinated military procurement and much progress has been realized. Practically all commodities used by the Armed Services are now being purchased under some form of coordinated purchase. Uniform procurement regulations for the three services have been developed by the services and are being issued at present. A start has been made in the standardization of equipment and specifications of the materials used by the three services, and a common catalog of all items used by the services is being developed.

Uniform methods and procedures for the development of military requirements, which are the base of all industrial mobilization planning, are being developed rapidly.

Another essential component of industrial mobilization—a knowledge of the source of supply for the three services—is underway. Thousands of private industrial capacities have been allocated to the various Services and a survey of these capacities to firm up tentative production schedules is gradually being developed.

These and numerous other activities constitute the military aspects of industrial mobilization. Much has been accomplished, but much, much more must be accomplished before we can claim to be industrially prepared to meet the needs of our National Security.

Success in the effort demands hard work and cooperation between the military establishment and our industry, both of which, fortunately, we have.

Clark, the Armed Forces Headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco, which initiates and develops and projects covered by the new program, has been in operation since August. It is pioneering an important practical phase of the unification program envisaged by the National Security Act of one nine four seven. The executive staff of the headquarters, headed by General Clark, includes Maj. Gen. George F. Moore, Deputy Commander, and Col. Francis H. Oxx, Chief of Staff, both of the Army; Capt. Frank R. Talbot, United States Navy, and Lt. Col. Howard W. Moore, United States Air Force, Deputy Chiefs of Staff.

The operations staff, under the chairmanship of Rear Adm. Frank J. Lowry, United States Navy, includes Col. Samuel R. Browning and Lt. Col. Frederick G. Waite, Army members; Capt. Thomas J. Kellher, Jr., and Carlton R. Eagle, Navy members and Col. Ralph W. Crane and A. Y. S. Smith, Air Force members.

This latter staff, known as the western area sub committee of the committee on facilities and services of the national munitions board, makes a preliminary study of scheduled projects and then refers them to a panel of specialists representing the various services in the fields being investigated. Their detailed report is submitted to the Operations Staff for review and further recommendations before being referred to General Clark for consideration and decision.

General Clark then confers with Rear Adm. Donald B. Beary, Twelfth Naval District Commandant; Maj. Gen. John E. Upston, Fourth Air Force Commander;

Maj. Gen. Leroy P. Hunt, Marine Corps Department of the Pacific Commander; and other appropriate western area departmental Armed Forces commanders to obtain concurrence in his recommendations and conclusions prior to his submitting them to Secretary Forrestal.

c. Initial Action. Upon appointment, the Board of Fitness will dispatch official correspondence through channels to the officer being considered for revocation of commission. (Commanders below the level of the convening authority will dispatch without comment, within 24 hours, all correspondence concerning the Board of Fitness action on a specific officer). This correspondence will include the information as listed in attachment 3.

d. Conduct of Board. Boards appointed under the provisions of this section will proceed as indicated in attachment 4.

e. Objectives of the Board. The objectives of the Board of Fitness are twofold: First, to allow the officer concerned to show why he should be retained in the Air Force and why his commission or commissions in the Air Force should not be revoked; secondly, after thoroughly evaluating the evidence in the case to make an appropriate recommendation to the Chief of Staff, USAF. (See attachment 5).

f. Board Recommendations and Disposition of Case:

- (1) The Board of Fitness recommendation will contain at least one of the courses listed in paragraph 1, attachment 6.
- (2) Unless trial by court-martial is recommended, the Board of Fitness shall dispose of its proceedings in accordance with the

11. Resignation or Retirement in Lieu of Board of Fitness Action. The tender of resignation (Exhibits B or C—attachments 12 and 13) or request for voluntary retirement in lieu of Board of Fitness action will be forwarded together with all allied papers in the case by the Board of Fitness direct to the individual's immediate commanding officer and then through channels to the Chief of Staff, USAF, Washington 25, D. C., ATTENTION: Director of Military Personnel, DCS/P, for necessary action. The Board of Fitness and all commanders above the Board of Fitness level will recommend by indorsement, approval, or disapproval of the resignation or the request for voluntary retirement as they see fit. In addition, the individual's immediate commanding officer will include in his indorsement the information contained in Exhibit E (attachment 15). Commanders indorsing tender of resignation or request for voluntary retirement will dispatch them within five days after receipt.

12. Action by Headquarters USAF. In all instances where revocation of commission or demotion is recommended by the Board of Fitness and unless the Chief of Staff, USAF, disagrees, the case will be referred to the Secretary of the Air Force Personnel Council. The latter will act as a final Board of Review and will recommend to the Secretary of the Air Force either retention in the Air Force or revocation of commission or demotion to a lower grade, but in no instance to one lower than the officer's permanent grade. The action of the Secretary of the Air Force will be final. The officer who is being considered.

U. S. AIR FORCEAir Force Band

Tentative plans to give examinations for Air Force bandmen seeking promotion to grades of staff sergeant, technical sergeant and master sergeant were reported this week.

Indication is that the examinations will be given next month, resulting in the creation of eligibility lists for promotions to be made after 1 Jan.

The disclosure of plans for the promotion tests coincided in Washington with the completion of preparations by the crack official USAF Band, conducted by Maj. George

S. Howard, for inauguration of a Fall and Winter concert series in Washington.

Widely praised as one of the Nation's outstanding musical organizations, the 121 piece Air Force Band was organized in June 1942 by Warrant Officer (later Lt. Col.) Alf Heiberg.

A versatile organization, the AF Band boasts it is the "most carefully selected band in the world." More than 1100 professional musicians were auditioned for billets in the musical organization.

Major Howard, its conductor, who doubles in brass as Chief of Bands and Music for the Air Force, holds a doctorate in music from the Chicago Conservatory. He entered the Army in 1943, leaving a post as director of the band and orchestra school at Pennsylvania State College.

In addition to directing rehearsals of the AF Band for its participation on the "Air Force Hour" radio broadcast, for other varied official performances and for the projected Fall and Winter concert series, Major Howard supervises activities of the Air Force's 48 other bands, 34 in the United States and 14 overseas. An additional six bands are projected.

Assisting Major Howard is Capt. Joe Beckett, executive officer of the office for Bands and Music.

With Air Force personnel experts, Major Howard and Captain Beckett are completing details for inauguration of the band career field in the Air Force. It is believed that this will be one of the Air Force's first established career fields and the imminence of promotion examinations indicates that much progress already has been achieved.

Assisting Major Howard in directing the busy musical schedule of the official AF Band are Chief Warrant Officers John Yesulaitis and Samuel Kurtz.

These conductors lead varied musical careers, for the AF Band—although always harmonious—possesses heterogeneous characteristics. It can and often does resolve itself into a 100 piece marching band, a 90 piece symphonic band, a 70 piece concert orchestra, or a 35 voice glee club, and when the occasion arises becomes at once five separate dance bands. Its members perform also in various smaller chamber and instrumental groups.

Featured soloists of the USAF Band include M. Sgt. Abrasha Robofsky, baritone voice, M. Sgt. Harry Meuser, bassoonist, M. Sgt. Norman Irvine, trombonist, M. Sgt. Robert Cray, flutist, M. Sgt. George Dietz, clarinetist, T. Sgt. Harry Fleig, oboist, T. Sgt. Paul Wolfe, violinist, T. Sgt. Arthur Will, cornetist, T. Sgt. Paul Dolby, marimbist, T. Sgt. Harold Hirsch, pianist, and S. Sgt. Lowell C. Smith, saxophonist.

SECTION III—REMOVAL FROM THE ACTIVE LIST

	Paragraph
Scope	13
Causes	14
Boards of Officers	15
Initiation of Action	16
Procedure for Boards	17

13. Scope. This section prescribes, in brief, the procedure for removal for cause of any commissioned officer from the active list of the Regular Air Force who has performed three years or more of continuous active commissioned service subsequent to being commissioned in the United States Air Force and/or Regular Army without regard to the length of active service performed prior to acceptance of such current Regular commission.

14. Causes. The criteria established as a guide for determining causes for which an officer should be investigated with a view to elimination or other appropriate action, which may include exoneration, are presented in attachment 1. (Reproduced here with).

15. Boards of Officers. The provisions of Title 1, P.L. 810, 80th Congress (contained in JAAF Bulletin 29, 1948), require the establishment of three boards to process officers for elimination. These are listed below with a brief description of their respective duties.

a. Screening Board. The purpose of the Screening Board is to provide a review of the records of all officers on the active list of the Regular Air Force and determine which of such officers should be required to show cause why they should be retained on the active list. This Screening Board is convened by direction of the Secretary of the Air Force and will be composed of five general officers of the Air Force and one or more recorders without vote.

b. Board of Fitness. The purpose of the Board of Fitness is to afford a fair and impartial hearing to any officer who has been selected by the Screening Board to show cause for retention. This Board is convened at such place or places as the Secretary of the Air Force may prescribe to receive evidence and to make findings and recommendations as to an officer's fitness to be retained on the active list. Whenever practicable, it is intended that Boards of Fitness will be convened at major air commands on specific direction from Headquarters USAF. If the Board of Fitness recommends the retention of any officer on the active list, his case shall thereupon be closed and shall not be subject to further action, except that such officer may again be selected to show cause for retention at any future time in accordance with the provisions of section 102, Title 1, PL 810, 80th Congress (contained in JAAF Bulletin 29, 1948). This Board shall consist of not less than three general officers of the Air Force whose Regular Air Force rank is senior to that of the officer appearing before it, and one or more recorders without vote. (No one will be included as a member of this Board who has considered or recommended the officer concerned to show cause for retention or who may be called as a witness in the case).

c. Board of Review. The purpose of the Board of Review is to review each case of officers recommended for removal from the active list by the Board of Fitness and make recommendation as to the retention of the officer concerned on the active list. The Board of Review will consist of five general officers and one or more recorders without vote and will be convened by the Secretary of the Air Force at such time as he considers appropriate. No one will be included as a member of the Board of Review who has previously considered or recommended the officer concerned to show cause for retention on the active list. If the Board of Review recommends the retention of any officer on the active list, his case shall thereupon be closed and shall not be subject to further action, except that such officer may again be selected to show cause for retention at any future time in accordance with the provisions of section 102, Title 1, PL 810, 80th Congress. If the Board of Review recommends against the retention of any officer on the active list, such recommendation shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Air Force for his action. The action of the Secretary of the Air Force, as the case may be, in removing any officer from the active list, shall be final and conclusive.

d. AR 420-5, 20 May 1940, is applicable to cases processed under these provisions only until it is superseded by appropriate Air Force publication(s).

16. Initiation of Action. The following procedures are outlined in attachment 7.

a. Manner of selecting officers who will be required to show cause why they should be retained in the service (including action by Headquarters USAF and field commanders).

b. Responsibilities of Headquarters USAF and major air commands in processing selected cases.

17. Procedure for Boards:
a. Except as otherwise prescribed herein, the boards of officers convened under the provisions of this Regulation will be governed by the applicable provisions of AR 420-5. Mem-

From High-Speed Bombers to High-Speed Transports MARTIN LEADS THE WAY INTO THE FUTURE!

YESTERDAY: The famous Martin B-10 bomber, faster by 100 m.p.h. than any other bomber of its day and speedier than most pursuit ships, made obsolete nearly all the world's military aircraft; won the 1932 Collier Trophy for Glenn L. Martin.

TODAY: The Martin 2-0-2 as a military transport can carry 61 military personnel or more than 15,000 pounds of military cargo—over twice the capacity of twin-engine equipment used in World War II and still in service. And the 2-0-2 cruises at speeds 100 m.p.h. faster than the World War II planes it replaces... yet operates from the same short runways, small airports.

Tomorrow

Martin engineers are constantly at work harnessing higher and higher speeds to the transport and combat needs of our Military Services. In the days to come, look to Martin for rotary wing aircraft and other swiftly developing fields.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1948

"No country is so remote from us that it may not some day be involved in a matter which threatens the peace."—PRESIDENT TRUMAN.

THE Joint Army-Navy-Air Force exercises, known as Operation Combine III, which began at Eglin Air Force Base this week, provide an interesting preview of some phases of future warfare. The operation is for the purpose of demonstrating air-ground planning and execution to officers of the advanced service schools. It should serve to stimulate original thinking and initiative of participants and observers and lead to more thorough integration and coordination of all elements engaged in combined operations. An important feature will be participation of paratroopers from the famed 82d Airborne Division of the Army. In this connection it is illustrative of post-war progress that twice as many troops can now be carried with the same number of planes as in World War II. The capacity of our average wartime troop carrier was 20 men, while the new transport plane carries 42 fully-equipped soldiers. This cuts in half the number of planes needed for an airborne operation, and greatly reduces the number of fields which must be provided. Furthermore, we are told that the parachute may be on the way out. A rotary glider is being developed for the precision landing of airborne troops in enemy territory. The recent rapid advances in the use of air transport for the movement and supply of troops may tend to revolutionize equipment. Continuous studies are in progress which point to the redesign of cumbersome weapons and vehicles with a view to reducing their weight and bulk and making them more readily transportable by air. Heavy artillery may be largely replaced by rocket-firing weapons. Light, small, sturdy vehicles, specially designed for stowage on cargo planes, may take the place of large, heavy, conventional trucks. The current highly successful Berlin airlift indicates that the cargo plane will occupy an important place in our calculations for future supply of troops in the field. Airborne operations are still in their infancy. The tactics and logistics involved present a fascinating field for investigation by soldiers and airmen of vision.

IN the shadow of an uncertain international situation the Armed Forces are preparing their legislative programs for presentation to the Eighty-first Congress which convenes next January. The Services have the inescapable responsibility of recommending legislation, including appropriations, which will provide for reasonably adequate national security, and at the same time they must keep within the budgetary limit of fifteen billion dollars, fixed by the President. However, this limitation may be regarded as tentative, and is probably based on the assumption of an improvement, rather than a deterioration, in the foreign situation. Recent developments would appear to indicate the necessity for increasing defense appropriations well above the limiting figure. One expensive item which presumably will be on the recommended legislative agenda will be Universal Military Training. This proposal failed of passage in the Eightieth Congress and present indications point to rough sledding in the next Congress. An extension of Selective Service beyond its present two-year limit will undoubtedly be sought. Every effort will be made to secure Congressional consent to the drafting of needed doctors for service in the Armed Forces. High on the legislative program of the Services will be a revision upward of the pay and allowances of commissioned personnel. This will be based on the forthcoming report of the special board appointed by the Secretary of Defense which is expected to recommend substantial increases. The Army and the Air Force are sure to give top priority to recommendations for a statutory reorganization. At present the Army and Air Force are functioning under wartime executive orders, greatly at variance with the National Defense Act, but these authorizations will expire on 30 June 1949, making new permanent legislation an imperative necessity; and such legislation probably will be based upon the recommendations to be made by the Hoover Commission now studying the reorganization of the executive branch of the federal government, including the Army, Navy and Air branches.

ACTION by the Navy Department in selecting 288 women for commissioning in the Waves of the Regular Navy, marks the first step toward the establishment of similar women's units as permanent components of the Regular Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps. The law authorizing such permanent components had the active support of the top war and peace commanders of all the Armed Services and was direct recognition of the efficient and loyal services performed by American women in the Armed Forces during the war. At peak strength during that conflict there were 327,861 women serving in various capacities in the military and naval services at home and overseas. Wacs, Waves, Spars, and Women Marines constituted 253,721 of this total, nurses 71,405, and the women medical specialists in the Army, 2,735. The courageous and efficient work of the nurses under the most dangerous and arduous of front line conditions (a number were captured by the Japanese) further increased the debt the nation owes to this valiant group of women whose affiliation with the Armed Services goes back for many years. Today there are some 15,000 women serving with the Services, 8,305 as Wacs, Waves, Wafs, and Women Marines, and 7,295 as nurses and medical specialists. Under the new law now being made effective, the newer women's organizations which were set up as war expedients will become permanent parts of the Regular establishments, thus not only utilizing their particular skills but also permitting better utilization of our limited combat manpower. In considering the great contribution of women to the National Defense, credit must also be given to the wives and members of the families of the officers and enlisted personnel who cheerfully suffer personal hardships and make sacrifices to keep up the morale and contribute to the fighting efficiency of their men.

The inadequacy of democracies to deal with dictators, as demonstrated by the Czech surrender, is responsible for the financial dictatorship which the French Parliament has created, and the effort of Prime Minister Chamberlain to form a "Government of National Safety" which will include leaders of the Opposition Party, Anthony Eden and Winston Churchill combined with the plans for political and financial fronts is the decision to press rearmament.

To provide for our National Defense we must have an adequate Air Force. We are by no means strong enough. We have not men enough, nor have we enough material to meet even a minor emergency. We must have an Air Service highly trained and absolutely efficient. Without it we are inviting a national disaster. (General Patrick, AC.)

There is some evidence that the Philippine insurgents are receiving continued shipments of arms, the fact being acknowledged by an agent of Aguinaldo. He says they are not obtained from the Germans, but the papers have published a lurid account of a German plot to arm the insurgents and encourage them to resist the Americans. We may rest in peace, for the landing of German officers is not likely to take place without Admiral Dewey's knowledge.

Napoleon III and William of Prussia busy themselves in crying "Peace, peace" when, apparently, peace there is none. Napoleon has thrice, of late, given pacific assurances, and the third time declared "I will say no more, since whatever I might say, the Press would construe it as predicting war". King William makes a speech, intending it to be pacific, and is straightway forced to make another, showing that it was not warlike. You cannot possibly stop the popular belief that war is certain.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The suspension of the discussion of the Berlin crisis by the Security Council of the United Nations indicates that there may be some hope in the Council that Russia may agree to lift its hunger blockade as a condition precedent to a four-power foreign ministers' conference on all German problems. In presenting the American position on the subject to the Council Dr. Philip Jessup reiterated the oft-repeated proposal of the western powers to hold such a conference, provided Russia would first permit resumption of rail, highway and water traffic between the western zones and Berlin.

The unexpected indefinite recess of the sessions of the council followed statements by the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, and France that the imposition of the blockade of the western sectors of Berlin was a violent and aggressive act and a threat to world peace. Previously Andrei Vishinsky of Russia in a bitter speech insisted that the Council had no right to consider the dispute and even declared that no blockade existed. When the Council voted 9 to 2 to consider the question, with only Russia and the Ukraine opposing, Vishinsky declared that his country would not participate actively in any further discussions of the subject. However, he and his assistants attended subsequent meetings, presumably leaving the Soviet Union in a position to veto an adverse decision by the Council. In his address Vishinsky had contended that the Council of Foreign Ministers of the four powers, and not the Security Council, was the appropriate body to consider the matter. The western powers have favored a conference of the foreign ministers, but only on condition that the blockade be first lifted by Russia. They objected to meeting under Soviet duress.

The adjournment of the Security Council was undoubtedly for the purpose of permitting informal, behind-the-scenes conferences which might evolve some face-saving formula for lifting the blockade and resuming direct negotiations. It is understood that a resolution requesting Russia to permit the free movement of supplies to Berlin has been prepared for presentation to the Council.

The return of Secretary of State George C. Marshall from Paris this weekend is undoubtedly directly related to the Berlin situation. The President wishes a first-hand report on current developments. The Secretary's visit closely follows that of John Foster Dulles, also a member of the Paris delegation, who conferred with Governor Dewey on the foreign situation. There is striking evidence of the bi-partisan character of our foreign policy in the fact that both the President and his principal opponent in the coming election are kept fully informed of international developments by ranking American representatives to the United Nations.

While the Berlin hunger blockade was receiving the attention of the Security Council the Committee on Political Affairs and Security was engaged in a heated discussion of international control of atomic energy. In characteristically vitriolic language the Soviet representative, the ubiquitous Mr. Vishinsky, denounced the attitude of the United States and demanded the destruction of our stock pile of atomic bombs. He hinted vaguely that Russia may have the bomb, saying that it was an illusion to suppose that one country had a monopoly on its production. Vishinsky made an apparent slight concession by indicating that Russia might accept international atomic control under the Security Council, provided the bomb was outlawed by simultaneous action. It will be noted that the control would be exercised under the Security Council, presumably subject at all times to a Soviet veto. Russian representatives have continuously and violently opposed the western proposal for full and free inspection of sources and production of atomic energy, with the right of veto waived.

Replying to Mr. Vishinsky, Ambassador Warren Austin of the American delegation pointed forcefully to the fact that destruction of stock piles of atom bombs would apparently apply only to the casings, which could be quickly fabricated with little or no inconvenience in almost any machine shop. The nuclear fuel, the vital element of the bomb, he insisted, should not be destroyed, since that could be used for peaceful purposes, as the source of atomic energy. The production of this nuclear fuel, he declared, was accomplished at tremendous cost in money, time and effort, and its retention was essential to future developments of peaceful application of atomic power.

Formal announcement has been made of the appointment of Marshal Bernard Montgomery of Great Britain as supreme commander of the combined military forces of Great Britain, France, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. General Jean de Lattre de Tassigny of France was named commander-in-chief of the land forces; French Vice Admiral Robert Jaujard will be flag officer of the naval units; and British Air Marshal Sir James Robb will head the air forces of the alliance. Some dissatisfaction was expressed in England and France over the appointment of Marshal Montgomery. It was frankly stated by some of the British papers that a French general should have been chosen as supreme commander, to serve as a stand-in for an American to be named later, presumably after a military alliance of the United States and western European powers had been effected.

Such an alliance was strongly favored by United States Senator Chan Gurney, of South Dakota, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who returned from Europe this week. He also told a press conference that he favored full diplomatic relations with Spain. Two years ago the United States and other powers, pursuant to a recommendation in a resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations withdrew the chiefs of diplomatic missions from Madrid, without formally breaking relations. It was reported without confirmation from Paris that Secretary Marshall had suggested to the British and French foreign ministers that the General Assembly be asked to rescind its resolution, thus clearing the way for full diplomatic recognition of the Franco government. General Charles DeGaulle of France has announced that he favors complete accord with the anti-Communist government in Spain.

Extensive strikes in French coal mines and work stoppages in other industries continue to harass the Queuille government. While much of this turmoil is undoubtedly due to Communist agitation it is also evidence of widespread dissatisfaction with the weakness of successive coalition governments. A stable and relatively permanent administration is essential to French recovery.

A rebellion in Peru initiated by some elements of the navy was quickly put down by government troops with considerable casualties. The uprising was centered in Callao, near Lima, but there were also minor outbreaks elsewhere.

The Air Surgeon—Maj. Gen. Malcolm C. Grow, Air Surgeon of the Air Force, has been appointed Air Force representative on the Committee on Medical Sciences of the Research and Development Board, National Military Establishment. Dr. Francis C. Blake, chairman of the Medical Sciences Committee, announced the appointment of General Grow to succeed Col. Otis O. Benson, who has served since formation of the committee in April.

Successor to Admiral Leahy—Irrespective of the outcome of the national election it is understood that Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy plans to resign as Chief of Staff to the President and senior member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Such an assignment will probably be rotated among the Services so it is probable that Admiral Leahy's successor will be chosen from the Army or the Air Force. Should Governor Dewey be elected President the logical choice would appear to be Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, who recently resigned as head of the New York National Guard after a half century of service in the Regular Army and National Guard. He is a close friend and associate of Governor Dewey and his principal adviser on military affairs. However, it is doubtful that General Drum would consider accepting such an assignment, except in a national emergency. He is fully occupied as head of the corporation which operates the Empire State building in New York. Nevertheless, it is certain that Mr. Dewey, if elected, would rely on General Drum for advice and assistance in matters pertaining to National Defense. Another retired officer who might be considered as a successor to Admiral Leahy is General of the Army H. H. Arnold, USAF-Ret., war-time head of the Army Air Force. The tremendous importance of Air Power in any possible future conflict might influence the President to select an airman as his Chief of Staff. The long service of General Arnold as a flyer and as the organizer of the greatest Air Force ever assembled, and his experience as a former member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff qualify him to a remarkable degree for such an assignment. Others who would inevitably be considered for Admiral Leahy's post are General Dwight D. Eisenhower and General Omar N. Bradley. However, neither is likely to be chosen, since General Eisenhower has only recently assumed his duties as president of Columbia University and General Bradley would likely prefer to remain as Army Chief of Staff.

Anti-Aircraft Artillery—Thirty-one years ago, on 10 Oct. 1917, the Anti-Aircraft Artillery of the U. S. Army was born. On that day twenty-five American officers enrolled as students in the French Anti-Aircraft Artillery School at Arnouville-Gonesse. During the first World War 12,000 American soldiers served in the anti-aircraft branch of the Coast Artillery, but the first anti-aircraft regiment was not organized until 1920 when the 62d and 64th regiments were activated. With the development of bombing planes the defensive role of anti-aircraft artillery became of the greatest importance. All countries participating in World War II used thousands of anti-aircraft weapons to defend their cities, military installations and industrial facilities, the gunners on both sides accounting for hundreds of enemy planes. In the drive through France and Germany each American field army had a substantial number of anti-aircraft guns with which to parry German air attacks. General MacArthur also made extensive use of anti-aircraft artillery in his triumphant sweep from Australia to Japan. An airplane flying at top speed and at a high altitude makes a small and elusive target. Nevertheless surprisingly large numbers of aircraft were shot down by the accurate fire of the gunners. Many V-1 pilotless planes which caused such destruction in London and Antwerp during the latter half of 1944 were intercepted and destroyed by ground fire. The expenditure of ammunition for each plane destroyed during the early years of the war was very high. However, the American development of the remarkable proximity fuse resulted in greatly increased accuracy of fire. So far as one may now judge in this era of kaleidoscopic changes in warfare the importance of the anti-aircraft gun as a defensive weapon will increase. The greatly accelerated speed and the vastly extended range of new heavy bombers indicate that most every industrial city in the world may soon be vulnerable to enemy attack. To meet such a threat there must be a universal strengthening of air and ground defenses. Anti-aircraft will continue to have an important part in our National Security even in an Atomic Age.

An Independent Publication—The Washington Daily News, in its column "How's Your I. Q.?" on 2 Oct., posed the question, "The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL is published by the National Defense department; true or false?" The answer, given on another page, was "False (it is published commercially)." The News, of course, was right; the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, for more than 85 years, has been privately owned and operated as an independent publication devoted to the interests of all the Armed Services.

New Relative List Suggested—With the long-awaited publication of the Army promotion list of officers with their permanent ranks the suggestion has been made that consideration be given to making relative rank among officers in each grade conform to seniority in permanent rank, rather than in temporary rank as at present. Under such a proposal, for example, permanent colonels would take rank among themselves, with seniority determined by date of permanent rank, and in cases where the date is identical the determination would be based on length of active commissioned service. Temporary colonels would follow all permanent colonels, and would rank among themselves in accordance with length of service in their temporary grade, and where that was equal in accordance with total active commissioned service. Similar procedures would be followed with respect to other ranks. It is pointed out that due to the exigencies of the service and assignment opportunities some relatively junior and comparatively young officers were advanced to higher temporary grades, including that of colonel, months ahead of officers senior to them in permanent rank, who were equally qualified for promotion. Many of the younger officers are now permanent lieutenant colonels, but while they retain their wartime rank of colonel they continue to outrank many officers who are now permanent colonels. It is believed that the General Staff will give early consideration to the correction of this anomalous situation.

Army Chaplain Corps—Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Luther D. Miller, Chief of Chaplains, accompanied by Chaplain (Col.) Martin C. Poch, Executive, Office Chief of Chaplains, will leave Washington, 10 Oct., to visit military installations in Guam, Okinawa, Philippine Islands, Japan and Korea, Chaplain Miller and Chaplain Poch will return to this country about 15 Nov.

Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) James H. O'Neill, Deputy Chief of Chaplains, delivered the address during graduation exercises of the 68th class at The Chaplain School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., 6 Oct.

Chaplain (Maj.) John R. Strevig, Officer in Charge, statistics and Reports Division, lectured to a group assembled at Augustana Lutheran Church, Washington, D. C., 3 Oct. He spoke on the Augsburg Confession.

Chaplain (Maj.) Joel M. Wareing, assistant, Personnel Division, spoke at the monthly meeting of the 175th Composite Group of Chaplains, 90 Church St., New York City, 27 Sept.

Chaplain (Maj.) Harold G. Elsam, editor, The Military Chaplain, has been assigned to temporary duty at The Chaplain School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., for two weeks beginning 10 Oct. He will be assigned as a student to study the course in Pastoral Counseling.

Schools for Service Children—The recent opening of the school term for children serves to recall the difficulties of Service personnel in securing educational facilities for their children. At many Army posts and Air fields schools have been provided by the government. In most cases these are reasonably satisfactory, though many improvements are needed. However, attendance at these schools without payment of tuition is restricted to children of families occupying government quarters. Under the law these facilities are available to dependents of military personnel not residing on the post only on payment of tuition. Many Service children living near military reservations are often forced to travel considerable distances to attend public schools less satisfactory than those on nearby posts. These families pay a double penalty because of the unavailability of government quarters. They are forced to pay high rents often for unsatisfactory houses and in some cases their children are deprived of satisfactory free schools. At some overseas stations the situation is particularly serious. While improvements in school facilities have been made in Germany and Japan, difficulties are still being experienced in securing qualified teachers. In Paris no free schools are available and children of American military personnel have to pay relatively high fees at private schools. In Hawaii personnel living near outlying posts often have to send their children considerable distances to public schools or pay tuition for them at post schools. There seems to be no logical reason why these children should not be admitted free to post schools, whenever satisfactory free public schools are not readily available. In all probability Congress at the request of the Services would pass the necessary legislation to make this possible.

Nurse Flight Training—A refresher course for former flight nurses returning to extended active duty will begin in January at the School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Texas. Approximately 20 nurses will be enrolled for the 10-day class.

Bureau of Medicine & Surgery—Among recent changes in the Bureau was the appointment of Capt. L. R. Newhouse as Director of the Professional Division, and assignment of Comdr. R. H. Fletcher to head the Training Branch.

Comdr. George H. Davis, MC, USN, has been nominated for a post-graduate course of instruction in a Residency in Radiology at the Naval Hospital, NMMC, Bethesda, Md. He is presently on duty at that hospital.

Two medical officers who have volunteered for recall to active duty to aid in relieving the shortage of medical officers are Capt. Frank M. Cannon, MCR, USNR, San Rafael, Calif., assigned to the Naval Dispensary, San Francisco; and Comdr. Navy F. X. Banvard, MC, USN (Ret.), Baltimore, Md., assigned to Naval Gun Factory, Washington, D. C.

Comdr. Thomas F. Dowd, MCR, USNR, Philadelphia, Pa., is being recalled to active duty and has been ordered to post-graduate instruction at the Naval Hospital there under the new Navy Graduate Medical Training Program. He will be assigned to a Residency in Obstetrics and Gynecology.

National Guard Bureau Division Heads—Following announcement of the creation of Army and Air divisions in the National Guard Bureau, rumor was this week that respective heads of the divisions would be Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, 39th Infantry Division Commander and Adjutant General of Louisiana, and Brig. Gen. George C. Finch, commander of the 54th Fighter Wing of the Air National Guard in Georgia.

General Fleming is State Director of the Selective Service System in Louisiana. During the war, General Finch commanded Bartow Army Air Base, Fla., and Thomasville Army Air Base, Ga.

Claims of Former Prisoners—Military personnel interned by the Japanese during World War II and eligible for compensatory payments under provisions of Public Law 806, the War Claims Act of 1948 will have to be patient about receiving their remuneration.

As explained in Army Circular No. 289 and AF Letter 112-3, the claims for these payments are to be lodged with a War Claims Commission. But Congress provided no funds for activities of the Commission, which was to have made a report by 31 March 1949.

Therefore, the 81st Congress first will have to authorize funds for the Commission, whereupon claims will be accepted. Then some time will be required for adjudication and processing.

The Army and Air Force emphasize that wide publicity will be given at a later time to correct methods for applying for payments under the War Claims Act.

Army Judge Advocate General's Dept.—Upon their own initiative, and outside of duty hours, a number of officers of JAGO are taking advantage of the excellent night school facilities offered in the Washington, D. C., area. Among those enrolled in graduate work at George Washington University are: Lt. Cols. Joseph A. Guilmond, Lauren A. Arn, and Ernest B. Skinner; Maj. James R. Mills, Herber C. Leney, Summer Freedland, Virgil M. McElroy, Carl R. Lauritsen, and Kenneth J. Hodson; Capt. John S. Wilson, and Kerlin J. Bragdon; and Lts. Frank C. Stetson and Ralph L. Kaskell. Lt. Col. Nathan J. Roberts and Maj. William G. Downey are attending night courses at Georgetown University and Capt. Morton S. Jaffe is enrolled at Maryland University.

Col. William J. Hughes, JAG-Res., has returned to JAGO after a period of temporary duty in Hawaii where he was engaged in investigating a civil case involving the Department of the Army.

Recent visitors to JAGO were Lt. Col. Joseph Moss, JAG-Res., Philadelphia, and Col. John P. Oliver, JAG-Res., Arlington, Va.

Twelfth Army Group Reunion—The staff of the Twelfth Army Group will hold its third annual reunion at the Army and Navy Country Club at Arlington, Va., on 22 Oct. The observance will be an all-day affair, with a luncheon followed by golf and tennis in the afternoon and a dinner in the evening. General Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, who was the wartime commander of the Army Group, will be the only speaker at the meeting. General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff of the United States Air Force, will be a guest of the Twelfth Army Group Association at the reunion. General Vandenberg commanded the Ninth Air Force which provided General Bradley's troops with tactical air support during the drive across France and Germany. Members of General Bradley's wartime staff, most of whom are now in civil life, are coming to the reunion from all sections of the United States.

Air Force Officers at USMA—The Air Force will assign 80 officers to the U. S. Military Academy and one officer to the Military Academy Preparatory School.

Joint Army and Air Force Adjustment Regulations No. 3-15-1 provides for the transfer from the Department of the Army to the Department of the Air Force the following officers for such duties: General or colonel, six; lieutenant colonel, 28; major, 23; captain, 18 and lieutenant, four—a total of 79.

Air Force officials report plans for assignment to West Point of seven colonels, 27 lieutenant colonels, 22 majors, 12 captains, three first lieutenants and nine other officers now completing work at civilian institutions. At the Preparatory School, the Air Force will have one officer, a captain.

A total of 40 per cent of each graduating class at the Military Academy will enter the Air Force on a volunteer basis. They will remain in the Air Force regardless of their ability to complete flying training successfully.

Army Signal Corps—Capt. Thomas O. Harrison, who entered the Army as a private in 1943, and was later assigned to Ft. Monmouth, N. J., as a corporal, has been appointed Public Information Officer of that Post, succeeding Capt. A. K. Quinn. Captain Harrison, who took part in the Ryukyu Island Campaign in Okinawa, and later served in Korea, was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation from the Signal Corps Officers Candidate School in 1944. Following his return from the Pacific area, Captain Harrison served in the Extension Department of the Signal School, and after completing a course at the Army Public Information School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., was assigned as Assistant Public Information Officer.

Veterinary Corps—Brig. Gen. J. A. McCallam will be in Richmond, Va., 12 Oct., to attend the 31st Annual Convention of the Southern Veterinary Medical Association. He will present a paper on "The Army Veterinary Corps of Today."

General McCallam will also attend the Quartermaster Corps Inspection Service subsistence conference at New York, 14 Oct., and give a talk on "The Surgeon General's Responsibility in Food Inspection."

Dr. Gus A. Vaninetti, Everett, Wash., has been commissioned a 1st Lt., Veterinary Corps Reserve, and assigned to active duty upon his own request. He will be stationed at the 1101st Army Service Unit, Boston, Mass., with temporary duty not to exceed 13 weeks at Chicago, Ill., to attend a course in meat and dairy hygiene inspection.

End PW Promotions—The Army and Air Force have terminated automatic promotions of officer and enlisted personnel who were prisoners of war. Henceforth, these men will be required to meet identical criteria established for other promotions. However, provision is made for exceptional cases where additional evidence merits reconsideration. But officials say that few such promotions are indicated for recovered personnel.

F-84 Grounding Rule Lifted—The Air Force has removed the ground order on the Republic F-84 aircraft, imposed last week, but has restricted use of wing-tip tanks on the Thunderjets pending completion of investigations by Air Force officials and representatives of the manufacturer. The wing-tip tanks were designed for use in extending the range in level flight, but not for use in combat maneuvers.

Terminate Five Retiring Boards—Effective 1 Nov. retiring boards at the Army and Navy General Hospital, Madigan General Hospital, McCormack General Hospital, Tilton General Hospital and William Beaumont General Hospital will be discontinued. Air Force retiring boards at these hospitals will be dissolved on or about the same date. Details are reported in Circular No. 296 and AF Letter 160-3.

Army Field Forces—General Jacob L. Devers, Chief, Army Field Forces, addressed the members of the Virginia Real Estate Board, 8 Oct. at Old Point Comfort, Va. That evening, General Devers was in Richmond, Va., to attend the "All-States Day Review." He was accompanied by his Aide, Lt. Col. J. F. P. Hill.

Maj. Gen. Doyle O. Hickey, Assistant Chief for Developments, and Maj. David G. Cogswell, Developments Section, visited the Bell Aircraft Corporation, 28 Sept., to inspect the XH-15 Helicopter. From there, they proceeded to Cleveland, Ohio, to participate in the annual inspection of the NACA Propulsion Laboratory as guests of the NACA.

Naval Dental School on the subject of "Dentistry for the Cancer Patient." Obituaries

Col. Julia C. Stimson, ANC-Ret.

Col. Julia C. Stimson, internationally famous Army nurse and director of the nursing service of the American Expeditionary Forces during World War I died in New York Sept.

Colonel Stimson, regarded as one of the world's outstanding authorities on military nursing, was the first nurse to hold the relative rank of Major in the United States Army under the national defense act passed by Congress in 1920. She was director of the Nurse Corps from December 1919 until she retired in 1937. She was also Dean of the Army School of Nursing until the school closed in 1932.

Colonel Stimson was born in Worcester, Mass., 26 May 1881, the daughter of Rev. Henry A. Stimson and Alice Wheaton Bartlett Stimson. She was educated in New York, received an A. B. degree from Vassar College in 1901 and an A. M. degree from Washington University in St. Louis in 1917. She was given an honorary science degree from Mount Holyoke College in 1921.

She was director of the School of Nursing at St. Louis from 1913 to the beginning of World War I, when she was sent to France as chief nurse at Base Hospital 21, A. E. F. She received the Distinguished Service Medal from her own government as well as the British Royal Red Cross, First Class and the French Medaille de la Reconnaissance Francaise. She was also cited by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig.

Although Colonel Stimson retired from active service in 1937, she was recalled to duty in 1942 for the purpose of procuring nurses for the Army Nurse Corps. She is probably the only nurse ever appointed an "Acting Quartermaster" so she could issue her own transportation requests.

At the time of retirement from active service, Maj. Gen. C. R. Reynolds, then Surgeon General wrote:

"Your outstanding service during the World War showed the possibilities of the nursing profession as a military asset. Since that time you have not allowed the routine of peace to dwarf the higher and more important requirements and possibilities of your office as superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps. By personal observation, I have felt that you have consistently labored with three principal objectives in mind—the development of the highest standards of nursing in the Army; the close contact between the Army Nurse Corps and the profession in civil life in its educational, social service and public health activities; and the perfection of plans to activate the nurses of this country for their part in the medical service in time of need. In these purposes you have been highly successful."

Maj. Gen. M. W. Ireland the Surgeon General during World War I, credited her with the following: "During your time, you secured for the members of your Corps a recognition in the Army second to none of the various Services. You have kept the Corps in touch with your profession in civil life. You have improved the personnel to a remarkable degree so that it is a joy for the members of your Corps to carry on their work. Finally a suitable retired status was secured for service disabilities and longevity retirement. I feel that there is no nursing organization in the world that has the attractive standing that the Army Nurse Corps has today."

Colonel Stimson entered the nursing profession, she said, because of the influence of Annie Goodrich, former dean of the Yale School of Nursing. It is because of women like Julia Stimson that other nurses have the courage to carry on.

Capt. Philip K. Gilman, MC, USNR (Ret.)

Capt. Philip K. Gilman, MC, USNR (Ret.) of San Anselmo, Calif., died 7 Sept., 1948, after a short illness in the Stanford Lane Hospital, San Francisco, Calif.

He was appointed to the rank of Captain in 1939 and returned to active duty in 1941, serving as Executive Officer at the Naval Hospital, Oakland, Calif. and as assistant District Medical Officer, 12th Naval District. He was transferred to the honorary retired list in 1943 and continued on active duty until 1945.

He was graduated from Johns Hopkins Medical School in 1905 and in 1916 became a member of the faculty of Stanford University teaching surgery and also engaged in the practice of surgery in San Francisco. As a member of the county and state medical societies, he held a high position for many years and was a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

He is survived by his wife, Emma, and two sons, Philip and John.

On one of her journeys, she, with Captain Patrick and their two sons, was shipwrecked on Christmas Island. They remained on the island about ten weeks and during that time a daughter was born.

OFFICERS OF THE ARMY!

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL began three weeks ago, publication of the first Promotion List of officers of the Army compiled under the provisions of the new law (Officer Personnel Act of 1947). Last week we published the Promotion List for Majors. This week we print the Promotion Lists for permanent officers in the Medical, Dental, Veterinary Corps, Chaplains Corps and Professors. Next week we will print the first half of the list of captains of the Regular Army promotion list, and the following week the conclusion of that list. Providing official compilation and checking has been completed, the lists for First and Second Lieutenants will follow.

Inasmuch as future selections will be made from these lists and that by reference to them you will be able to determine the relative position of those selected and those not selected it is important that you preserve these issues for reference.

If you are not a subscriber enter your subscription now. If your subscription is about to expire send us your renewal so that you will not miss any issues. Order promptly—the shortage of paper necessitates our limiting each issue to orders in hand.

"UNITED STATES AT WAR"

• A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volumes, "United States At War" is still available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the War's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by Military, Naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theaters and at home. Profusely illustrated, they merit a place in every well balanced library.

A small number of each of the volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Copies of Volume I are available only in paper binding.)

New ROA Treasurer

Election of Capt. Carroll Morgan, USNR, of Washington, D. C., as National Treasurer of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, has been announced at ROA national headquarters, Washington, by Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, ORC, Executive Director.

Reserve MG Units

For the first time in its history, the Army is going to organize Reserve Military Government units.

This was revealed with announcement of plans to activate this month a Mobilization Planning Branch of the Civil Affairs Division, to be headed by Lt. Col. M. W. May, jr.

Thousands of officers and enlisted men, most of them veterans of Military Government duties during and immediately after World War II will be organized into the highly specialized new Reserve units.

They will receive technical instruction at drill periods throughout the year and are expected to initiate field training exercises during the summer of 1949.

At least two Military Government Groups are authorized for each of the six Armies within the Zone of the Interior, with a colonel slated to command each such unit.

The Military Government units will be established on specific TO&E allocations and will be self-sustaining.

If war comes, officials explain, these skilled Military Government specialists will be ready immediately to fill M-Day assignments and to form the trained nucleus for rapid expansion of the Army's entire Military Government program.

In addition to the colonel commander, each Reserve Military Government Group will have eight lieutenant colonels. Company commanders will be lieutenant colonels and platoon commanders will be captains.

During World War II, Military Government officer and enlisted strength exceeded 30,000, and it is from this group that the Army has been besieged by inquiries concerning the future role of Military Government in the Army.

Now with establishment of the Mobilization Planning Branch, the Army has evidenced the fact that "Military Government is here to stay as a part of all Army planning."

The Mobilization Planning Branch will have three sections—Area Planning Section, Organization and Mobilization Section, and Training Section.

In addition to its responsibilities for developing the Reserve program, the Mobilization Planning Branch will supervise Military Government training being given Regular Army officers at service schools.

Assisting Colonel May in inaugurating the new activity will be Lt. Col. J. R. Case, Maj. Robert H. Stoner and Capt. Lucile G. Odbert.

Midshipmen Fete Superintendent

Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, jr., Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, was feted at a dinner held by Midshipmen, First Class, of the Third Battalion the evening of 5 Oct.

Among topics discussed at the after-dinner symposium were "Resolutions for First Class Year," "A Midshipman's Public Relations Responsibilities," and "Practical Lessons Learned from September Leave."

On the same evening, Midshipmen, First Class, of the Fourth Battalion, had as their dinner guest Capt. Charles C. Slayton, USN-(Ret.). Later, this group joined the Third Battalion group's symposium.

Army Reorganization and the Army CodeBy COL. ALFRED C. BOWMAN, GSC
(Third article in a series.)

It will be recalled from last week's discussion that in addition to the laws which avowedly affect organization (principally the National Defense Act of 1916), the statute books contain thousands of other laws directed to specific or incidental matters whose relation to Army organization at first blush seems remote.

Many of these statutes, however, through the very terms they employ and the concepts which they assume more than what they actually say, often exert influence so direct as to be tantamount to control.

Such laws are to be found in all 50 Titles of the United States Code. They include current appropriation acts which regulate the availability of money for specific purposes and thereby virtually determine many organizational questions.

Unless we thoroughly rearrange and consolidate these laws as well, we shall not really have reorganized the Army.

You can shift departments and branches, change names, regroup and alter channels ad infinitum, but you cannot in any permanent or complete sense reorganize the Army without thoroughly rearranging and modernizing all the law which directly affects it.

In this sense, there has been no real Army reorganization since the Elihu Root reforms of 1903. All intervening "reorganizations" have been mere short-lived reshufflings, based on temporary authority or having limited effect.

Alterations thus effected during major emergencies have regularly failed to survive in time of peace, but nothing has halted the steady accretion of straitening "permanent" legislation whose stranglehold must be broken if genuine organizational reform is to be accomplished.

Though less dramatic than the drafting of the new organization bill, the work of general statutory restatement will be a necessary part of the final expression of the reorganization plans now being developed. Without it, they cannot achieve enduring reality.

There is other equality compelling justification for the considerable effort which codification of Army law necessarily involves.

The practical working need for consolidation and integration of overlapping and inconsistent provisions, and for repeal of outworn statutes, speaks for itself, at

Financial Digest

The need for diverting a substantial amount of the national income to capital investment was emphasized this week in a comprehensive analysis of the immediate and long-range economic outlook prepared for the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States by Dr. Emerson P. Schmidt, the Chamber's Director of Economic Research. The report on the whole takes an optimistic note, although it points out that many readjustments in the national economy are inevitable as supply and demand shift under changing conditions.

Pointing out that the task of steering a course that will check inflation and still not cause undue contraction is a difficult one, the report states the government must bear the heaviest responsibility in this respect.

Anti-inflation steps taken by the 80th Congress are beginning to make themselves felt, the report states, continuing with the following observations:

"The new consumer credit controls will choke off part of the excessive demand. The increase in the reserve requirements of commercial banks will slow down loan and credit expansion. The Federal Government's upward adjustment of the interest rate on short-term borrowings is being reflected in higher interest charges for private loans.

"These steps constitute the beginnings of what may be an era of tighter money. In the past, very few booms have come to an end except through a growing scarcity of money.

"We now face the difficult task of steering a middle course in our policies so as to check inflation without precipitating contraction. Our goal is abundant job opportunities, high-level output, and reasonable prices."

Concluding, the report declares: "Government having control of fiscal and monetary policies has the greatest responsibility in steering this course."

least to the officer who is not a lawyer.

The necessity for simplification of the very task of finding what the law is, quite aside from even the most moderate reform, will require no argument with the soldier engaged in administrative work. The multiple sources of the law and the great difficulty of relating these sources to each other, have long evoked fervent curses from Army personnel on every level.

Embodiment in a new Army Code of a single authoritative expression of the long-term instructions of Congress (which is what the laws are) will provide the service with a simple and usable "bible" of all basic legal matters affecting its day-to-day business. In terms of time saved alone, it will justify the trouble and expense involved a thousand times over.

When completed, the Code will be adaptable to publication in loose-leaf form. Amendments can then be effected by insertion of whole pages, leaving no room for error and eliminating the messy inter-paging, marginal notes, and pasted in-

Merchant Marine

The Committee for the Companies and Agents, Atlantic and Gulf coasts, have reached a one-year agreement with the National Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots. Deck officers will receive a six per cent wage increase, increases in subsistence and transportation allowances and an increase of $1.85 to $2.00 an hour for relief officers. The agreement calls for a wage review 1 April 1949.

Meanwhile, the strike on the Pacific Coast has entered its second month with little hope of immediate settlement. Employer groups have maintained their position that they would not negotiate with the striking unions until their leaders had signed non-communist affidavits. It is estimated that West Coast longshoremen have lost $4.8 million in wages to date as a result of the walkout which has tied up 172 American ships.

Drastic charter policy changes under which charters of Government-owned vessels to steamship companies will be in direct ratio to the number of craft owned have been announced by the U. S. Maritime Commission following the recent decision cancelling charters of bareboat vessels to companies owning no American flag tonnage.

New Regulations stipulate that no more than two chartered Liberty vessels may be chartered to a company that owns only one Liberty or Liberty-type vessel under the American flag. Each Victory ship, C-1 or C-2 owner will be entitled to as many as four chartered vessels. The owner of a coastal C1MAV1 ship may charter three vessels, and each C-3 ship will entitle the operator to charter of five vessels.

Lewis Lapham, president of American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., has announced that the company has decided to declare $6,120,998 of its construction reserve out of the fund and to pay capital gains tax on the amount. The money is being withdrawn for use in the company's general funds in preference of use for purchase of ships.

serts, which have long disfigured Army publications, and led to frustration.

It is hoped that the work will fleet the advice of officers in the field based on practical experience. To that end, suggestions from individuals as to particular matters which should be considered in connection with the project will be gratefully received.

The general plan for developing the code will be discussed next week.

Army Finance School

Col. Hiram B. Turner, Commandant, Army Finance School, St. Louis, Mo., has announced enrollment of the following officers in the 10-month Advanced Finance Officers' Course, Class No. 2.

Lt. Cols. Ernest Kemp and John J. Madigan, Jr.; Maj. Ambrosio del Rosario, Farrell E. Hupp, Fred R. Huston, Charles A. McIntosh, Alan A. Sawyer, and D. S. Hutcheson (Canadian Army); Capt. Kenneth K. Anderson and Alfred A. Fahstedt; and 1st Lts. Walter H. Culp and Llewellyn S. Helsley.

Complete Pay Draft

Despite the fact that a scheduled meeting of the Commission on Service pay was not held this week, tentative recommendations of the group have been submitted to the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force and to their Chiefs of Staff.

It is anticipated that these six top officials will meet with Chairman Charles Hook and other members of the Commission to make recommendations concerning modifications in the pay proposals.

But late this week no date had been set for the forthcoming meeting, following which the Commission will submit its final report to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

The Commission had planned a formal meeting for 5 Oct. to complete the tentative draft of the critical pay report. However, this meeting was not held.

USNA Air Training

Naval Air Facility pilots completed the summer aviation indoctrination program for the Plebe Class with a flight of 18 Plebes recently. A total of 1,043 flights were made since the program was initiated last 21 June, according to records at the Annapolis Naval Air Facility.

The purpose of the indoctrination program is to give members of the Plebe Class their first contact with Naval Aviation with one hour flights in both the N3Ns, (trainer), and PBVs (patrol plane). Naval Air Facility pilots conducted the N3N phase of the program, and an Atlantic Fleet Patrol Squadron Detachment was assigned to handle the PBV phase.

With the beginning of the Academic term last week, the regular Aviation indoctrination program of First and Second Class Midshipmen commenced. This program, more involved than the Summer Plebe training, is designed to give each upper classman additional flights to acquaint him with problems of control and employment of aircraft. The Fall program, which will last through November, is conducted jointly by Naval Air Facility and Naval Academy Department of Aviation pilots, along with the Atlantic Fleet Patrol Squadron Detachment.

of the individual soldier. It can be used as an incentive to improve performance and as a basis for helping men to correct weaknesses. The report will serve also as a guide to assignments. When an individual is referred to a Classification Board, the efficiency report will be used by the board in reaching a decision on the appropriate disposition of each individual as provided in e below.

d. Commanding officers will give publicity to the enlisted rating system. It is essential that all personnel understand the purpose of the report and the items upon which the ratings are based.

e. In certain instances, an efficiency report will be required by a Classification Board as a guide to deciding the action to be taken on a case. In such cases, a complete Classification Board efficiency report will be accomplished. An additional sheet may be attached to the report to provide sufficient space for complete explanation and recommendation for further action. An unsatisfactory efficiency report, other than a Classification Board report, may be the cause for Classification Board action. In this case, no additional Classification Board efficiency report will be submitted to the Classification Board unless requested by the board because previous reports have been determined inadequate.

f. In order to provide an adequate basis for evaluation in the rendering of a Classification Board efficiency report (par. 5a (3)), the rater must have had the opportunity of observing the individual being rated over a period of not less than 30 days.

2. Procedure.—Since efficiency reports will be a major factor in determining progress in every enlisted man's career, the report will be prepared with greatest accuracy. Omissions, indistinct entries, failure to complete each section of the report, inconsistencies, and absence of signature where required, will work to the disadvantage of the enlisted person concerned, and will require the return of the report for correction. Failure to prepare the reports correctly will thus result in a large volume of unnecessary correspondence and loss of time and labor. Where efficiency reports are required to be rendered to accompany Application for Advancement—Career Guidance Program (DA AGO Form 359), the return of those incorrectly accomplished might delay promotion of the enlisted person. Commanding officers will be responsible for requiring a check to be made of each report, section by section, so that administrative errors may be corrected prior to the submission of the report.

Section II PROCEDURE FOR RENDERING REPORTS

3. On whom rendered.—An enlisted efficiency report will be submitted on all enlisted personnel in grades 1 through 6 who are classified in a career field.

4. By whom rendered.—a. The rater (secs. II, III, IV, and V, DA AGO Form 297) will be the immediate duty supervisor of the enlisted person reported upon. An immediate duty supervisor is defined as the commissioned officer, warrant officer, or noncommissioned officer who normally has daily contact with the person being rated with respect to duty assignment. In rare instances where no noncommissioned officer is the immediate duty supervisor, an enlisted person not of an appropriate noncommissioned grade may be designated as the rater. For those individuals on temporary duty, detached service, or special duty, who are working under the immediate control and supervision of an officer, warrant officer, or noncommissioned officer, other than those of his assigned unit, the efficiency report will normally be completed by the individual exercising immediate control and supervision of the daily duty assignment of the individual being rated (see d below). The rater will be determined by the commanding officer of the company or comparable unit to which assigned or, in the case of those individuals on temporary duty, detached service, or special duty, by the commanding officer of the unit in which he is on such duty. The intent is to secure objective and worthwhile ratings for the purposes for which the efficiency report is intended.

b. In those cases where an individual has no immediate military supervisor (no commissioned officer, warrant officer, or noncommissioned officer of the National Military Establishment), the following procedure will be followed:

(1) The unit charged with the individual's administration will request a report from the enlisted man's immediate civilian superior. The request will state that the report will include a detailed description of duties performed and a description of the individual rated, to include attitudes toward work and associates in performance of duty, specialties of value to the Army, and any defects or weaknesses affecting his ability to perform present and future assignments. The individual preparing the report will utilize the enlisted efficiency report (fig. 1) as a guide in preparing this report.

(2) Upon receipt of the report from the civilian supervisor, the next officer, warrant officer, or noncommissioned officer in the chain of command will prepare Form 297 as the rater. The indorser will be determined as pre-

c. The indorser (sections VI, VII, and VIII, Form 297) will be a commissioned officer who is the immediate superior of the rater in the chain of command (see e below). This officer will be the individual who is most familiar with the duty assignment of the individual being rated.

d. Where circumstances preclude the necessary familiarity with the total performance of the individual, such as headquarters company personnel assigned to staff positions in a division or army headquarters (see e(2) below), the rater and indorser will consult with other officers and noncommissioned officers familiar with the duties of the individual being rated, prior to the completion of the necessary items on the form. The rater and the indorser will evaluate the information received prior to completion of the report.

e. Following are examples of appropriate raters and indorsers on the enlisted efficiency report:

(1) A first cook in a unit will normally be rated by the mess steward. The indorsing officer would be either the mess officer or the unit commander.

(2) A personnel management technician (290) in the classification office of an army headquarters will normally be rated by the enlisted chief of the section (290). The indorsing officer would normally be the classification officer in charge of the section.

(3) A squad leader in an infantry rifle company will normally be rated by the platoon sergeant. The indorsing officer would normally be the platoon leader or unit commander.

(4) A battalion sergeant major in an infantry battalion will normally be rated by the battalion adjutant and the indorsing officer would be the battalion commander.

(5) A first sergeant in a field artillery battery will normally be rated by the battery commander and the indorsing officer would be the battalion commander.

f. No efficiency reports will be rendered on personnel who are assigned or attached to replacement depots, overseas processing stations, or assigned to a detachment of patients of a general hospital without specific duty assignments. For personnel who submit applications for promotion while in patient status in the detachment of patients of a general hospital, efficiency will be determined by directives governing the enlisted career guidance program.

5. When rendered.—a. Each of the following types of efficiency reports will be rendered as indicated:

(1) Regular efficiency report.—When, after a period of 90 days or more, the rated individual of the first 6 grades ceases to serve under the supervision of the rater, as a result of transfer or separation.

(2) Special efficiency report.—When an enlisted person makes application for promotion no special efficiency report will be submitted if an efficiency report has been rendered on the individual within the preceding 90 days.

(3) Classification Board efficiency report.—When an enlisted person is ordered to appear before a Classification Board for any reason immediate Classification Board action will be required when an individual's score on an annual, regular, or special efficiency report is lower than a critical score determined by the Department of the Army, but no additional Classification Board efficiency report will be required when such a report has been submitted within the preceding 90 days and is adequate as determined by the board.

(4) Annual efficiency report.—A report will be submitted annually on enlisted personnel of the first 6 grades on the dates indicated below, except that no annual report is required if another efficiency report has been rendered on the individual within the 90 days preceding this date.

(a) Reports on grade 6 personnel, 30 June.

(b) Reports on grade 5 personnel, 31 August.

(c) Reports on grade 4 personnel, 31 October.

(d) Reports on grade 3 personnel, 30 November.

(e) Reports on grade 2 personnel, 31 December.

(f) Reports on grade 1 personnel, 31 January.

(5) Efficiency reports governing duty assignments of less than 90 days will not normally be rendered, except in those cases where a Classification Board efficiency report is required to be rendered.

b. Period covered.—When an enlisted individual's status changes by reason of permanent change of station or detached service of 90 days or more, the date prior to EDCMR will be used as the closing date and the EDCMR will be the opening date for the next report rendered. In those cases where an enlisted individual's assignment status does not change, the question of opening date will be governed by the date of his last efficiency report before the occasion necessitating the submission of the efficiency report. In case of doubt, the date of last duty rated, as shown on the soldier's qualification card, will be taken as the closing date of the last report. Where efficiency reports are rendered for the first time on any individual, the inclusive dates will be governed by the occasion and type of efficiency report required to be rendered. In most cases this will be the time for which the rater has been in the same supervisory position over the individual being rated.

c. Number to be prepared.—Under the provisions of a above, only one copy of the efficiency report form will be prepared and submitted as required. The preparation of additional copies is prohibited.

6. Channels for forwarding efficiency reports.—All enlisted efficiency reports will be forwarded by the officer accomplishing the indorsement to the Central Examining and Computing agency designated for the unit. The Central Examining and Computing agency will, after scoring the efficiency report, transmit the standard score to the custodian of the individual's personnel records for appropriate entries thereon.

Section III DIRECTIONS FOR COMPLETING REPORTS

NEXT Saturday, 16 Oct. finds Army playing Harvard at Michie Stadium in one of the top games of the east. The cadets rolled over Lafayette by a top-heavy score and looked extremely impressive in so doing. Harvard, meanwhile, became the talk of collegiate football circles by virtue of its stunning upset of a strong Columbia team.

The Crimson is playing its first season under a new coach, Art Valpey. He comes from Michigan, where he served with Fritz Crisler during the most successful seasons the latter has known. Working with a nucleus of some two dozen lettermen, it would seem as though he has already inoculated the Harvards with a fair-sized dollop of Michigan's vaunted victory virus.

Nevertheless, we feel that Earl Blaik and his two platoon system carry too many guns. The system, by the way, consists merely of using one complete team on attack and another on defense. Blaik thus becomes the first college coach to bring the unlimited substitution rule to its logical conclusion.

Navy also plays on 16 Oct., meeting Missouri in Baltimore. The midshipmen, to mince no words about it, played bad football against Cornell. Every break in the game went in Navy's favor, including Cornell's missing their second point after touchdown. This would have given the redoubtable Jimmy Wills (13 for 13, plus one field goal) a chance to win the game if Navy had been able to capitalize on more than one of its five excellent scoring opportunities in the second half.

George Sauer commented disparagingly on Navy's tackling after the California game and said he was going to do something about it. He did, as for the most part it required only one Navy defender to bring down a Big Red ball carrier instead of four or five. However, that was the beginning and the end of the encouraging factors.

If Navy plays through the rest of its season as it did against Cornell, it won't win a game. There's still hope that Sauer can build an attack around Baysinger's short passes, provided his receivers hang on to the ball. However, like a great many other Navy football observers, after two years plus of losing ball we've got to see before we believe.

Army has announced the completion of a home-and-home agreement with Southern California, with the first of the two game series to take place in New York in 1951. Preliminary plans call for transporting the entire corps of cadets to Los Angeles the following season, a move which would be some transporting but probably worth it from a morale and recruiting standpoint.

If nothing else, the dates given should convince potential Army opponents that it is wise to apply early.

Today (9 Oct.) both academy teams are on extended jaunts, Army to Champaign, Ill., to meet the Illini and Navy to Durham, N. C., to tangle with Duke.

the name and station of the unit to which the man is assigned, on duty with, on temporary duty, detached service, or special duty. Official abbreviations may be used. Examples: Hq Co, 3d Arm Div, Ft Knox, Ky; 24th TC Trk Co, Glessen, Germany; OQMG, Food Sv Div, Wash, D. C.

j. Report date.—Enter the date report was forwarded by the custodian of the personnel records to the rater.

8. Method of rating.—a. There are two rating scales used in the enlisted efficiency report. One, used only by the rater, has five points or boxes numbered like this: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. The other has ten points or boxes numbered like this: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

b. Suppose the rater is judging how well Sgt. Doe handles difficult problems. First, he will consider all the men he knows in the same grade who have jobs of equal difficulty and with the same general responsibilities as Sgt. Doe. Suppose the rater knows 50 sergeants that are representative of all the sergeants, good and bad, in the Army. About 4 of the 50 would be the very best at handling difficult problems, 5 of the five-box scale would be marked for them. About 11 of the sergeants would do the poorest job of handling difficult problems and 1 would be marked for them. About 11 of the sergeants would be marked 2; and about an equal number would be rated by marking 4. The largest number of the 50, about 20, would be average in their ability to handle difficult problems and 3 would be marked for them. The charts in figure 2 show how the ratings on any trait or quality for 50 men of the same grade and duties would spread from one end to the other of the five- and ten-point scale.

c. The following rules will help the rater make fair ratings:

(1) Read each phrase or question carefully to get the meaning of it.

(2) Do not compare the man being rated with other men of higher or lower grade. Ask this question: "How well does the phrase or question apply to the man I am rating when I compare him with all the men I know doing work of equal difficulty and responsibility?"

(3) Use the entire scale when rating. Remember that any one of the phrases or questions will fit a small number of the very best men, and an equal number of the very poorest.

(4) Consider each phrase or question alone. Do not permit the rating given on one item to have anything to do with the rating of another phrase.

(5) Do not let a biased opinion of a man be the cause for giving either a high or low rating on any phrase or question. Even a good man will have some weaknesses, and even an inefficient man some good points. A high rating given because of friendship may place the man in a particular job he may not be able to fill. A man with an unfair low rating may be penalized in promotion or special training. Both of these situations could cause poor morale.

(6) The way a man acts in a situation under unusual conditions is often not the usual or typical way he does things. His rating will be based on the way he acts most of the time.

9. Section II, for rater.—Twenty-five phrases commonly used to describe men, their qualifications and the manner in which they do their work, are listed. The rater is to judge how well each of the phrases describes the man being reported on. With an electrographic pencil, make a heavy X inside one of the five boxes to the right of each phrase that shows the evaluation of the man. If an electrographic pencil is not available, a No. 1 black lead pencil may be used. The use of ink is prohibited. Care will be taken to prevent smudges. Mark the X inside the box. Do not let the marks run over. If a change in rating is desired, erase all of the first work so that no smudges are left, before marking the correct box.

a. The first fifteen phrases, numbers 1 to 15, are desirable traits. The higher rating a man receives on these traits, the higher is his efficiency.

b. The last ten phrases, number 16 to 25, are undesirable traits. The lower rating a man receives on these traits, the higher is his efficiency. For example, an X in box 5 for the phrase "1. Takes proper action in absence of orders" means that the person being rated always does the right thing when there are no orders to guide him. An X in box 5 for the phrase "16. Lazy on the job" means that the person being rated is always lazy on the job.

10. Section III, for rater.—There are ten specific questions with ten-point scales in this section of the enlisted efficiency report. Use an electrographic pencil or a No. 1 black lead pencil as indicated in paragraph 9, to mark an X inside one of the boxes to show how well the man does the things asked about. For each question the scale ranges from box 1 for the very poorest men in the Army to box 10 for the very best men. Follow the instructions for evaluating the man given in paragraph 8.

11. Section IV, for rater.—a. Time rater has known man reported on.—Mark the box that shows how long the rater has observed the man in the assignment reported upon.

b. Knowledge of man reported on.—Mark the box to the right of the statement that best shows how closely the rater is working with the man at the time the enlisted efficiency report is filed out.

12. Section V, authentication by rater.—a. Signature.—Rater will sign in ink, after completing sections II, III, and IV of the enlisted efficiency report, and indicate the title of his present position, example: John J. Jones, Mess Steward.

b. Grade.—Rater will type or print his grade in ink.

13. Section VI, for indorser.—a. Knowledge of man reported on.—Follow directions for section IV, paragraph 11.

b. Rating characteristics of the rater.—Mark an X in the box that indicates how objective, honest, and impartial the indorser believes the rater is in evaluating the man he rates.

14. Section VII, for indorser.—Follow the directions for section III, paragraph 10.

15. Section VIII, authentication by indorser.—a. Signature.—Indorser will sign in ink, after completing sections VI and VII of the enlisted efficiency report, and indicate his present position and organization, example: John J. Doe, CO, Hq Co, 4th Army.

b. Grade.—Indorser will type or print his grade in ink.
